A Letter from Green Bay Packers President/CEO

MARK MURPHY

Dear Packers Fans,

Our 2014 season was another exciting campaign, both for the organization and our fans. As is often the case with NFL seasons, we experienced thrilling highs and disappointing lows. Although we fell short of our ultimate goal, an NFL championship, we again performed at a high level and demonstrated a consistency that is impressive in today's NFL. We made the playoffs for a sixth straight season (the 17th in the last 22 years), captured the division title for a franchise-record fourth straight year and advanced to the NFC Championship Game for the third time since 2007, tied for the most in the NFC over that span.

Lambeau Field proved again to be a strong home field advantage for our team. The "Get Loud Lambeau" campaign helped propel the team to an undefeated home season for the 13th time in franchise history, the second under Head Coach Mike McCarthy. Additionally, the Divisional Playoff victory over Dallas, our fourth straight year with a home postseason contest, was played in an incredible atmosphere.

Our players continued to excel, led by quarterback Aaron Rodgers, who earned his second NFL MVP award. Aaron has a host of talented teammates on offense who continue to produce at an elite level, and the defense, behind the versatile Clay Matthews, features veteran leadership with ascending young playmakers. Although the loss in Seattle was as tough a loss as I've ever experienced, I'm very confident in the way we've moved forward under GM Ted Thompson and McCarthy, and have high expectations for another championship-caliber season.

I'm proud of the work our employees have accomplished during our five-year renovation project on Lambeau Field and the Atrium. As the project wraps up this summer, our home is poised to provide an even more memorable experience for visitors. The new Packers Hall of Fame will celebrate our rich history with the latest features of today's best museums. The new restaurant, 1919 Kitchen & Tap, with its excellent food, atmosphere and outdoor plaza, will be a great addition. Both attractions are located on the main floor of the Atrium and will complement each other. Visitors to the Atrium and stadium also will benefit from enhanced cellular and WiFi capabilities this year.

To the west of Lambeau Field, we're getting ready to begin development of the Titletown District. The initial phase includes a public plaza that will feature activities throughout the year, complementing the exciting offerings and atmosphere on our game weekends. Building on the success of the Lambeau Field redevelopment, this unique area will help attract visitors to our area, as well as provide dining and entertainment options for residents of our community.

In addition to business development efforts, our community support through charitable giving remains very important to the organization. Green Bay Packers Give Back, our all-encompassing community outreach initiative, has provided support in a number of ways, including the Packers Foundation's $1.1 million in grants last year, with impact grants of $250,000 each to Achieve Brown County and efforts to fight hunger. In total, our charitable impact was more than $6 million last year.

Your unwavering support of the Packers continues to be the envy of professional sports teams across the country. It is greatly appreciated, and never taken for granted. Enjoy the season!

Sincerely,

STAYING FOCUSED on the Big Picture

McCarthy's 'master plan' broadens head coach's view, allows staff to grow

By Vic Ketchman | packers.com

Mike McCarthy will try to make it three in a row.

Two years ago, McCarthy made good on a big-letters promise to re-tool the Packers' running game. Last year, it was defense. This year, he has relieved himself of play-calling duties and will train his focus on improving the special teams.

"Special teams need to improve. It's an area definitely of concern. The culture is going to change in there. I can promise you that," McCarthy said during a press conference in February that announced a reshaping of the special teams coaching staff, with Ron Zook taking over as coordinator.

The bigger news from that press conference was that McCarthy would no longer call plays. That responsibility has been passed on to Tom Clements, whose new title is associate head coach/offense.

High anxiety?

"Any time you make a change, to the outside there's always a reaction, one way or the other, so I understand it. From my position, a big part of trying to grow your football program is your evaluation process. The evaluation process doesn't begin after the season; it's ongoing, so everybody is always being evaluated. That's a big part of my job. This decision to give up play-calling is a result of the process telling me to go this way, and it's something I've been thinking about since post-2011," McCarthy said during an interview in the spring.

"I feel great about the decision. I felt really good the day I did it. I think it's the right decision on so many fronts. No. 1, it's the right thing for the team. It takes me from being totally involved in the offense and not being as involved in the defense and special teams as I'd like, to being very much involved in offense, very much involved in defense and very much involved in special teams. I'm excited about the personal challenge," the Packers' head coach added.

Clements, formerly the Packers' offensive coordinator, becomes the team's play-caller. Edgar Bennett, formerly the Packers' wide receivers coach, replaces Clements as offensive coordinator.

"He didn't blink; he was excited," McCarthy said of Clements' reaction to the promotion. "He's called plays before. He called plays when he was a quarterback in Canada. It's fun to call plays. As a coach, the play-caller gets to compete the most. It tells you the kind of person he is."

Alex Van Pelt, who switched from coaching running backs to quarterbacks in 2014, will now coach QBs and wide receivers. It's all part of a cross-training plan McCarthy initiated in 2011.

"This is why," McCarthy said of his decision in '11 to move Bennett from running backs coach to wide receivers. "Edgar needed the opportunity to expand his knowledge base on the perimeter aspects of our offense, in the passing game. He was given that opportunity as our receivers coach and knocked it out of the park. I trust Alex and this'll be a good experience to broaden his horizon. Obviously, it's preparing him for the next step. This is all part of the master plan."

It's a plan that allows McCarthy to broaden his view of his team, and allows for the continued growth of his staff.

"It's rewarding to give your staff more opportunity for success. I've always taken a lot of pride in trying to promote from within. It's a commitment to the men who make our program better each and every day. I think we have the finest coaching staff in the NFL, and I'm utilizing the resources," McCarthy said.

But what about that play-calling? McCarthy is one of the game's most renowned offensive strategists. Bill Belichick made a point of congratulating McCarthy for his matchup strategy following the Packers' win over the Patriots last season. Should Packers fans be concerned McCarthy won't be calling plays this season?

"I'm going to go to the offensive game-planning meetings. To me it's a thought process. I'm very stringent on communication during the game, when people should talk, when they shouldn't talk," McCarthy said.

How might the change impact Aaron Rodgers?

"Our system isn't going to change. Aaron has every opportunity to be successful. Play-calling is not an issue, based on the way we're structured. The design of the mechanics of the no-huddle offense between the quarterback and the play-caller is conducive to making the quarterback successful, and that's always been the focus of this group. That's the philosophy of our offense," McCarthy added. "Aaron has an excellent working relationship with Tom. The fit with Aaron is the highest priority."

McCarthy explained that he almost had to give up play-calling if he was going to become more involved with defense and special teams.

"For me to be in special teams meetings and defense meetings would've pulled me away from one of my primary responsibilities, and that was calling the game. I've always put a lot of time into calling my game," he said.

This year, he'll put more time into his team's overall game, especially his special teams' game. ■■■

INSTANT IMPACT

Last two drafts have produced impressive rookie performers

By Pete Dougherty | Green Bay Press-Gazette

Sometimes NFL teams draft for immediate help. Other times they're thinking a year or two down the road.

But regardless of the plan, the Green Bay Packers can only dream that this year's and future classes help them as much as their 2013 and 2014 drafts.

Those two classes have provided immediate help at several positions and played a key role in keeping the Packers in the thick of the championship race the last two seasons.

Four of the picks were immediate starters – Eddie Lacy and David Bakhtiari in '13, and Ha Ha Clinton-Dix and Corey Linsley last year. Three others have played substantial roles beginning their rookie seasons: Micah Hyde in '13, Davante Adams and Richard Rodgers in '14.

They are shaping up to be two of the best classes in General Manager Ted Thompson's first 10 drafts (2005-14) with the Packers.

"You do your work and hope you make good decisions and you hope you can get lucky," Thompson said of the '13 and '14 drafts. "You hope you have a coaching staff that is not afraid to play younger players, which we have. So you do a lot of hoping."

That Lacy and Clinton-Dix became starters as rookies was hardly a surprise. They were likely to play a lot no matter what because of the acute needs at their positions. But the key is that Thompson appears to have hit on good players with both selections – Lacy in the second round in '13, and Clinton-Dix in the first round last year.

In '13, the Packers badly wanted to upgrade their running game to help protect quarterback Aaron Rodgers, and Lacy was the likely starter the moment he was picked.

He came through in a big way by rushing for 1,178 yards and a 4.1-yard average in 15 games as a rookie and 1,139 yards, a 4.5-yard average and nine touchdowns in 16 games last season. And more than the numbers might suggest, his physical inside running style has provided the Packers with their best threat at halfback since Ahman Green was in his prime in the early 2000s.

Clinton-Dix was picked to fill the Packers' most imminent need in '14, at safety. The Packers were able to gradually work him into a prominent role, and he was a starter for the last 10 games plus the playoffs. With him and Morgan Burnett as starters, safety now is one of the team's stronger positions.

But in a sign of the unpredictable nature of the draft, Bakhtiari (fourth round in '13) and Linsley (fifth round in '14) were later picks selected with depth and the future in mind, yet defied the odds and became key players immediately.

When Bakhtiari came out of Colorado after his junior season, some scouts thought he wasn't strong enough to play right away and would need a year to develop his body. Linsley was picked to be a backup for JC Tretter, who was in line to start at center last season.

But something surprising happened in each of their rookie training camps. From the first day that pads went on, both looked like bona fide NFL players. So when knee injuries opened a spot on the starting line – Bryan Bulaga's at left tackle a week into the '13 camp, Tretter's four weeks into camp last year – the Packers felt fine giving the rookies first shot at the job.

Both played more than well enough from the start and now look like long-term solutions at their respective positions.

That's the nature of the draft. Sometimes, later-round picks outperform early-rounders despite the enormous resources NFL teams put into scouting.

Bakhtiari in effect became the player the Packers were hoping they were getting when they selected Derek Sherrod in the first round in 2011. And the Packers could only have hoped that Tretter would have been as good last season as Linsley ended up performing.

"We don't do it on purpose," Thompson said. "Bless their hearts it just works out that way. I wish I had some sort of secret place I could go to find out the answers to why it works really well with some and why it takes others a little bit longer, and on and on. It's just the way the draft works."

Hyde, Adams and Rodgers also have played significant roles early in their careers, and combined have helped compensate for a 2011 draft class that has only one player remaining on the Packers' roster: receiver Randall Cobb. The only other player from that class on the roster last season was cornerback Davon House, who signed with Jacksonville as a free agent in March.

"Sometimes you have a draft year it just doesn't work out," Thompson said. "You didn't do any less work or more significant work than in other years."

Hyde was a fifth-round pick in '13 who showed from early in camp the instincts and ability to play the ball at slot cornerback. With Casey Hayward dogged by a recurring hamstring injury that season, Hyde ended up playing 40 percent of the Packers' defensive snaps and held up well (one sack, four passes defensed). Last year he shared time early in the season with Clinton-Dix at safety and all year with Hayward at slot corner in the nickel. He played 64.4 percent of the defensive snaps. He also has returned three punts for touchdowns in his two seasons.

Adams, a second-round pick last year, quickly became the Packers' No. 3 receiver as a rookie and finished No. 11 among rookies in receptions (38).

And Rodgers, a third-round pick last year, showed good chemistry with Aaron Rodgers early in training camp and wound up playing almost half (45.5 percent) of the team's offensive snaps.

Both were major factors in key victories over New England in late November and over Dallas in the playoffs, and both figure to have more prominent roles in the offense this year.

The Packers probably can't expect all their draft classes to perform as well and quickly as the '13 and '14 classes did. But these are the kind of draft classes that make successful franchises.

"They have been very productive classes," Thompson said, "and hopefully they'll be even more productive going forward....At the end of the day you're trying to evaluate human beings, and I think the human race is difficult to have exact – it's not an exact science for sure." ■■■

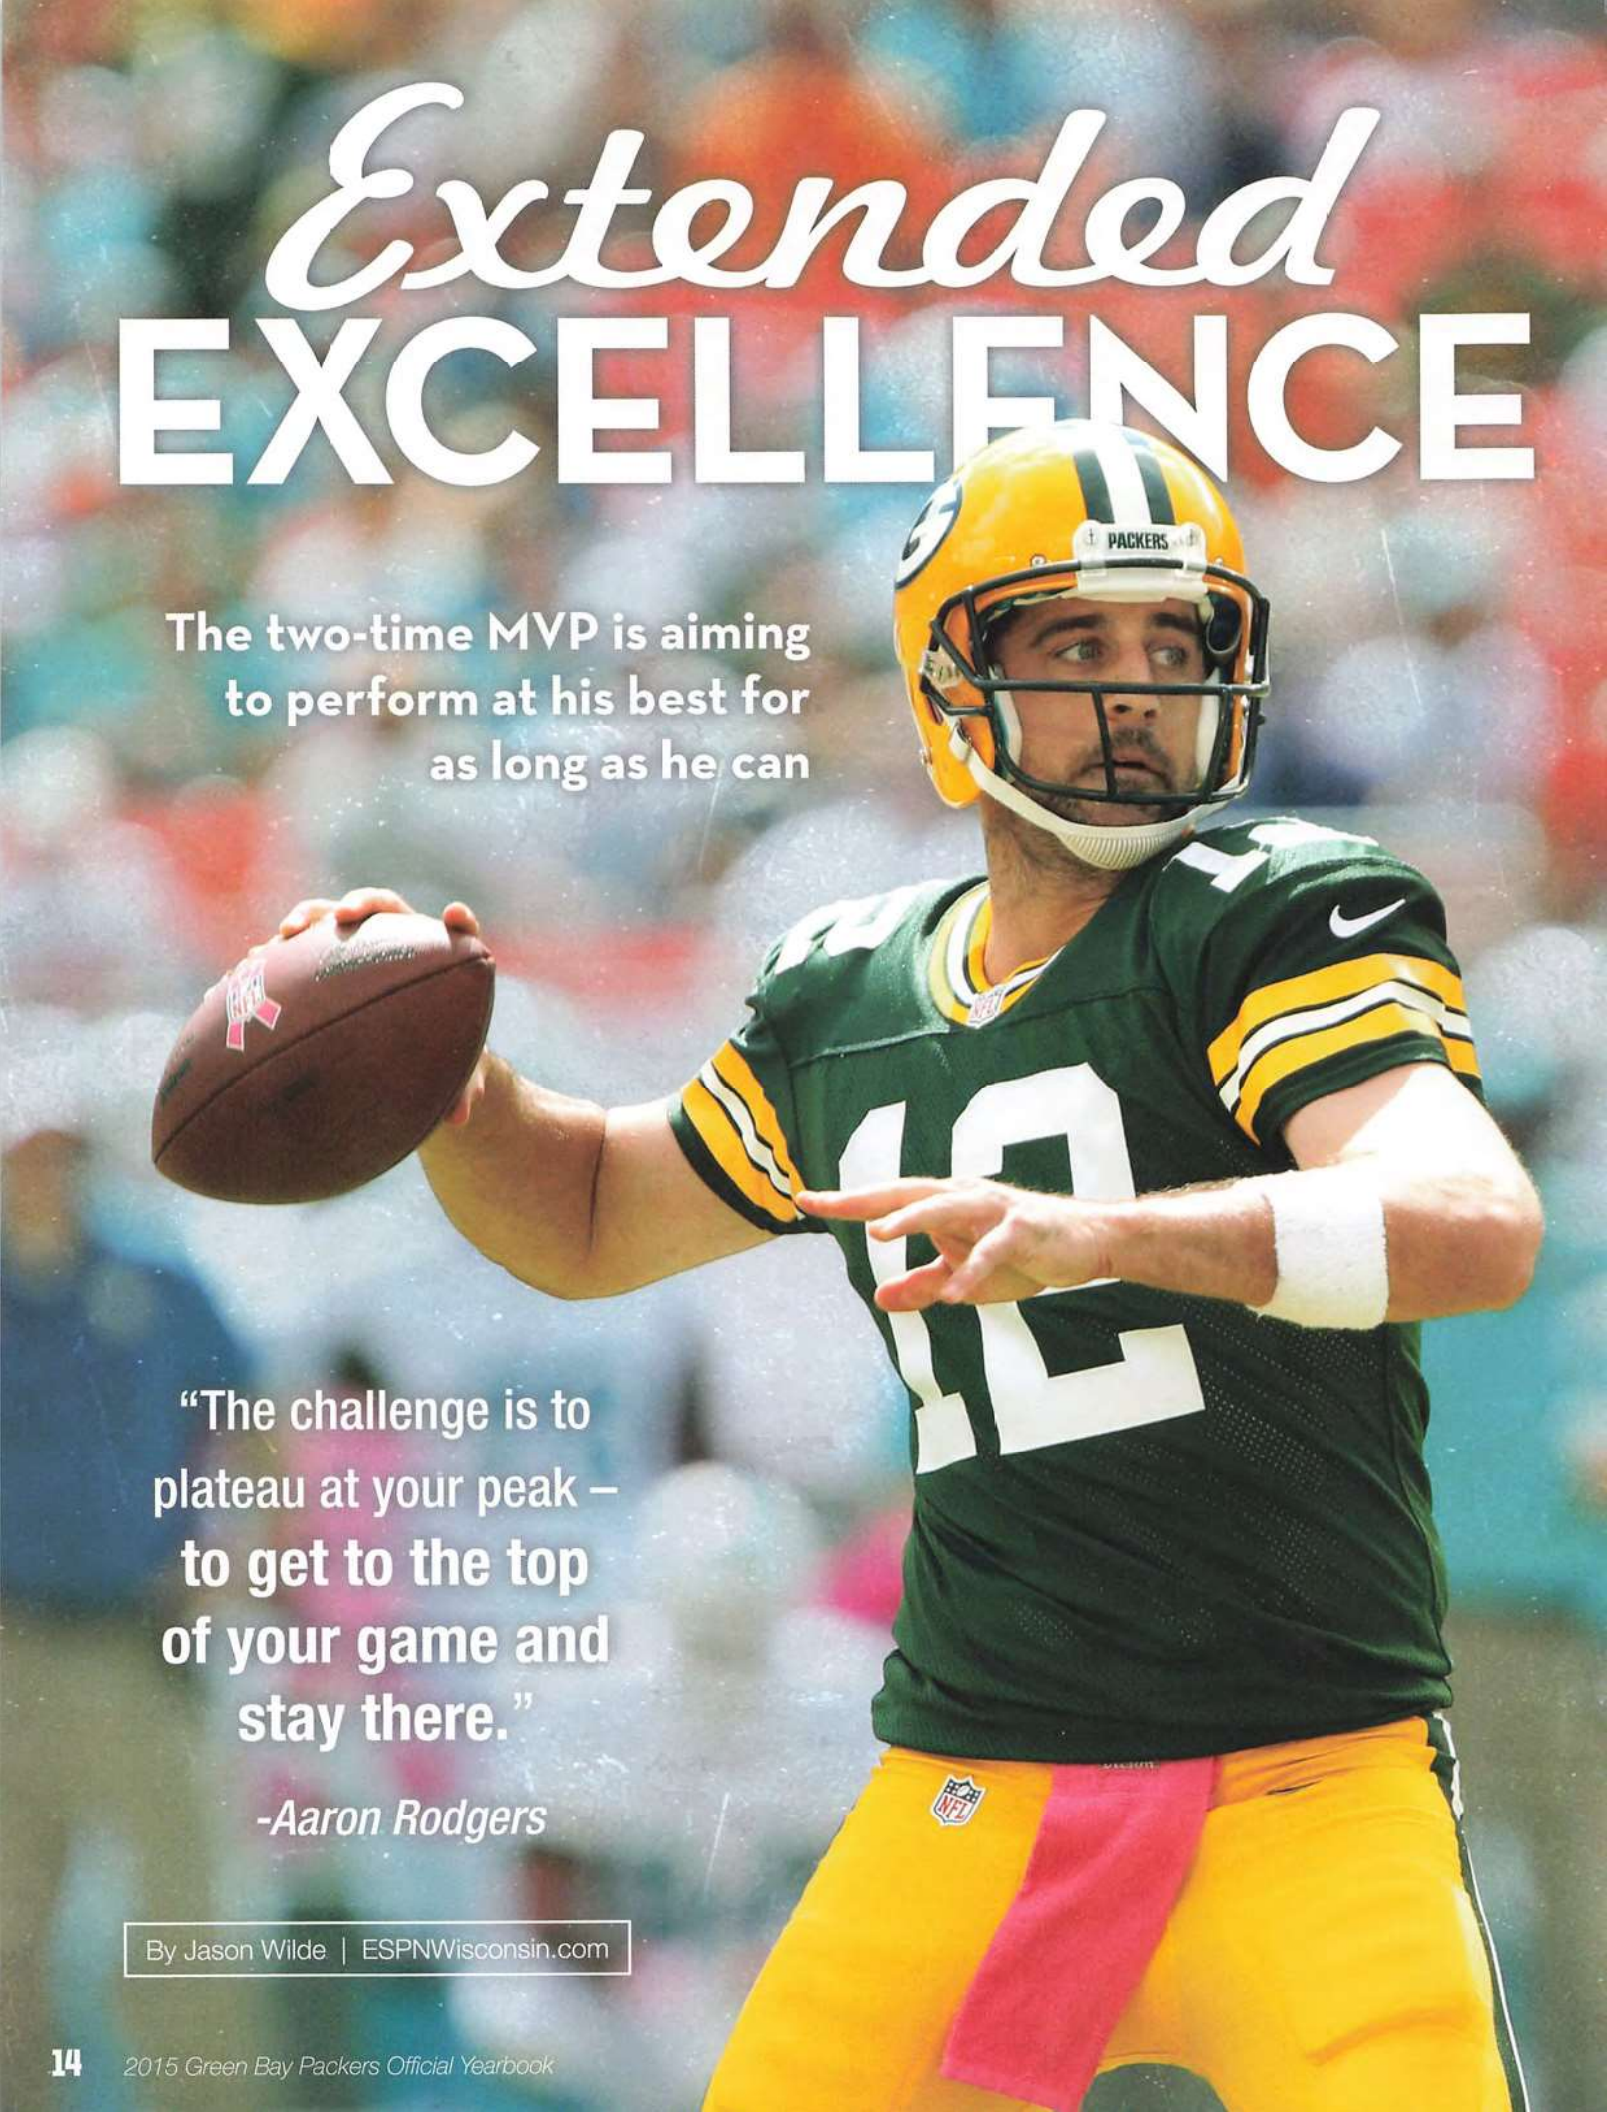
Extended EXCELLENCE

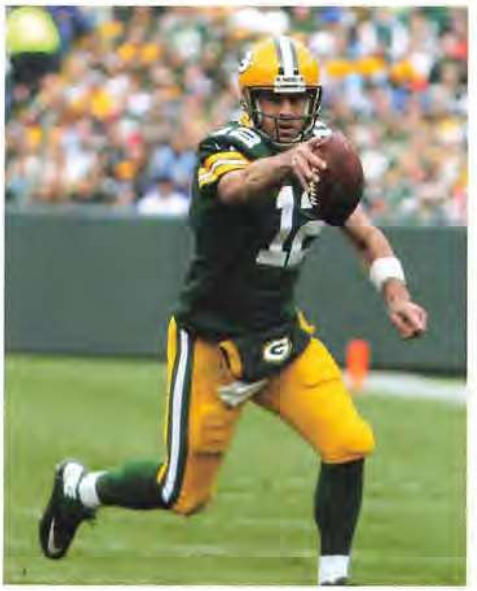
The two-time MVP is aiming to perform at his best for as long as he can



"The challenge is to plateau at your peak – to get to the top of your game and stay there."

-Aaron Rodgers

By Jason Wilde | ESPNWisconsin.com



Aaron Rodgers has as much fun as anyone. The Green Bay Packers quarterback loves bestowing a good nickname (ask a few rookies about the ones they received during the offseason), teasing coach Mike McCarthy about his offseason beard (let the "Just For Men" jokes flow) and poking good-natured fun at both his teammates and himself.

But the NFL's reigning MVP also fully understands how many people are relying on him to play at the level to which they've become accustomed with him.

"I've got a lot of people counting on me," Rodgers said during the offseason program this spring. "Obviously fans and fantasy owners want to see me do well, but directly, my teammates and the coaching staff. The organization expects me to play well."

Throughout his seven years as the team's starting quarterback – beginning with that transitional 2008 season when he took over for future Pro Football Hall of Famer Brett Favre – Rodgers has certainly played well. The 31-year-old is the NFL's all-time leader in passer rating (106.0), has the lowest career interception rate (1.6 percent) and has a career TD-to-INT ratio of 226 to 57 that's off-the-charts. He's thrown for at least 4,000 yards in five of the six seasons in which he was healthy.

After winning his first NFL MVP award in 2011, when he threw for 4,643 yards with 45 touchdowns and just six interceptions (122.5 passer rating) in only 15 games, Rodgers wondered aloud whether it was possible to put together such a statistically dominant season again. As it turned out, it wasn't. But he came awfully close last season in winning a second MVP, when he threw for 4,381 yards with 38 TDs and just five INTs while playing through a painful torn left calf muscle during the final weeks of the regular season and the playoffs.

Now, Rodgers sees his challenge as continuing to play at that level, even as outsiders – including the team's NFC North rivals in Chicago, Minnesota and Detroit – hope his production dips as he gets older.

"I think a lot of times people expect players to reach their peak and then be a diminishing player. And I think the challenge is to plateau at your peak – to get to the top of your game and stay there," Rodgers said. "I think that is where you really get respect from people.

"Because I think a lot of people are expecting, some even hoping, for you to fall. Expecting or hoping that one of these years – I know the other three teams in the division and their fans and players are hoping every year – that we fall off, I fall off. I think that's the exciting challenge, to be able to do it year-in and year-out. Because that consistency is where you really grow your legacy as a player. And there's a lot to be said about that."

Those who know Rodgers best, including associate head coach Tom Clements, who has worked with him since 2006 as his quarterbacks coach and then his offensive coordinator, believe that's realistic.

"He's a competitor No. 1. He takes care of himself, he has great physical ability, and he's playing a position where you can play maybe a little longer than other positions," Clements replied when asked why Rodgers should be able to accomplish his plateau-at-his-peak goal. "And as you get older at that position, even though you might still maintain your mobility, because of your experience, you don't have to move around maybe quite as much. I know that happened with me as I got older. You know the game better, you can see what's going to happen, so sometimes you don't have to scramble out, even though you can still do it. He still does it very well and I'm confident he'll be able to do it for as many years as he wants to do it."

Rodgers also has something else going for him: An offense that returned each and every one of its 11 starters from a year ago, when Rodgers played behind the best offensive line he's ever had, was complemented by running back Eddie Lacy and his second consecutive 1,000-yard rushing season and had two Pro Bowl wide receivers – Jordy Nelson and Randall Cobb – combining for 200 receptions over the regular season and playoffs.

Combine that veteran presence with Rodgers' excitement about the potential of his second-year pass-catchers (No. 3 receiver Davante Adams, tight end Richard Rodgers and reserves Jeff Janis and Jared Abbrederis), and the pieces are there for more offensive fireworks.

Of course, offensive production won't mean much if the season ends in disappointment, as it did last year, when the Packers fell short in the NFC Championship Game. Since the 2010 team won Super Bowl XLV, there have been difficult playoff losses, for which Rodgers said he bears responsibility. And to him, that's the ultimate lesson from the disappointment of that loss to the Seattle Seahawks: How precious each postseason trip truly is, and how vital it is to maximize those opportunities.

"We could have played better on offense – all of us, myself included," Rodgers said. "But while we'll look back on that with disappointment, there's not much you can take other than the missed opportunity and remember how difficult it is to get to that point.

"I think when you get older, it can give you a greater appreciation for the opportunities you have. And I think I've approached this job with a little more appreciation for just how special it is. I've always had a great respect for the game and the privilege we have to play this game, but just not wanting to waste any of the moments and enjoy the fun things in life. I think if you asked my teammates and Mike [McCarthy], they'd say I've definitely enjoyed things a little bit more. And that's a refocusing of energy and making the most of the days. Making them count."

That's exactly what Rodgers intends to do, not only for himself, but for his teammates, his coaches, and yes, those fans and fantasy owners. As much as he has given to Packers fans over the past seven seasons – with hopes of playing another eight or nine years – he also knows he's received plenty in return.

"I've grown up here in Green Bay, learned a lot about myself over the last 10-plus years," Rodgers said. "The city's been great to me, I've been able to become the guy I want to be. And a lot of that has been due to playing for such a great organization, but this community has been great as well.

"It's a blue-collar town. It's a town where they really care about the game and I think that pushes you to give it back to them. I've met some great people along the way, and kind of gotten an idea through meeting guys like Bart Starr what a legacy really is. And what a well-rounded player looks like.

"I'm just trying to do some great things in the community, give back and make a difference. I think that's what being a Green Bay Packer is all about. It's about what kind of imprint are you making on and off the field. And that's really important to me."

CLUTCH KICK

Crosby came through with the utmost at stake

By Mike Spofford | packers.com

The biggest kick of Mason Crosby's life will never possess the historical significance it otherwise could have, but the guy who kicked it will never forget what it meant to him and his team.

Crosby's clutch, 48-yard field goal to tie the NFC Championship Game in Seattle with just 14 seconds left won't be the first, second or even third thing that's discussed by pundits and fans when that January day at CenturyLink Field is recalled.

A late-game landslide burying the Packers' season was halted by the field goal, but only temporarily. Green Bay didn't get the ball in overtime, relegating Crosby's pressure-packed boot to a mere, ahem, footnote.

Never mind that, for all that had gone wrong in the final few minutes of regulation, it would have been an NFC title-winning kick if the Packers had simply stopped an across-the-field rainbow prayer of a pass for a two-point conversion following the Seahawks' go-ahead touchdown.

It would have gone down as one of the most celebrated kicks in franchise history. Instead, historically speaking, it's the second-to-last line in the box score.

Immediately after the game, Crosby called the whole experience "bittersweet," a natural word choice. As he prepared for the ninth season of a decorated career, with time allowing some emotional wounds to heal, his perspective broadened.

"I haven't had a ton of those, but that one I will look back and remember," Crosby said during the run-up to 2015, which begins with him only 17 points shy of Ryan Longwell's franchise scoring record.

> "I wish it would have been to take us to the Super Bowl, but I'll draw from it.
> I DEFINITELY THINK IT'S A DEFINING MOMENT IN MY CAREER."
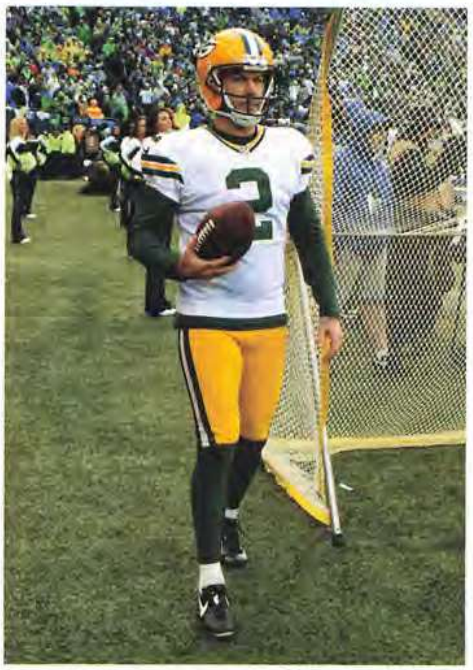
> -Mason Crosby



"The circumstances, I wish it would have been to take us to the Super Bowl, but I'll draw from it. I definitely think it's a defining moment in my career."

It came upon him practically in a flash. Trailing 22-19, the Packers got the ball back with 1:19 left on their own 22-yard line. Exactly one minute later, Green Bay called timeout with the weight of its season on Crosby.

"It happened so fast," Crosby said. "It felt like we were in field-goal range in no time. What was it? Two plays?"

Three, actually. Consecutive 15-yard passes to Jordy Nelson and Randall Cobb, followed by a 12-yard Aaron Rodgers scramble, put the Packers on the Seattle 36.

From there, it would have been a 54-yarder, within Crosby's prodigious range. Kicking a few balls into the net on the sideline, he was good to go, though it was by no means a gimme.

"I remember thinking, 'Let's just get a couple more yards,'" Crosby said. "The wind was a little swirly."

With 35 seconds left and three timeouts, the Packers still had enough time to push for the end zone and the win. But two incomplete passes preceded a short throw to Nelson over the middle, and it was overtime or bust.

In the heat of the moment, the football gods seemed to be working against Crosby and the Packers.

Having blown a 19-7 lead in a 2-minute, 27-second span that featured two Seattle TD drives sandwiched around an onside kick, the Packers were in a game-on-the-line situation no one could have envisioned just moments earlier.

For the naysayers, a miss by Crosby would have rounded out an epic collapse during which nothing went right for the Packers. Along that train of thought, perhaps more fitting would have been a blocked field goal at the most critical of times, as the Packers seemed destined for that very scenario.

Seven blocked kicks (three FGs, two PATs, two punts) during the regular season contributed to the eventual dismissal of special teams coordinator Shawn Slocum and had upped the aggression of opposing units.

"We had gone, I think, four years since we'd had a field goal blocked, and they kind of came in bunches, which was unfortunate," Crosby said. "They're pinning their ears back. They think, 'We can block these kicks. We can come get him.'"

On top of all that, Crosby had experienced shockingly few last-second, make-or-break attempts for a veteran kicker. The only one, since beating Philadelphia in his first career regular-season game in 2007, defeated the Giants in New York in 2011. Two tries in eight years does not a track record make.

To Crosby's credit, none of that mattered.

More relevant was the career day Crosby was enjoying, which was adding to a streak of made postseason field goals that dates back to 2010 and is now tied for second in NFL history (16). His 4-for-4 performance to that point began with two chip shots and continued with a 40-yarder in the second quarter plus a 48-yarder earlier in the fourth quarter.

The fourth kick, which put the Packers ahead 19-7 with 10:53 left, was in the same direction, from the same distance and from the same left hash mark as the game-tying one. The spot of the ball for the two kicks was practically identical, the late-game one only a foot-and-a-half back from the prior 48-yarder.

"Through pregame and everything, you could tell he was locked in and hitting it great," teammate Brett Goode said. The long snapper for all of Crosby's career except his rookie season, Goode sensed there was no knocking Crosby off-kilter in this game, regardless of the situation.

"We're confident no matter where we line up to kick it. You can't go out there making something different than it is."

Crosby was two years removed from his horrific 2012 slump, and he had revived his career by channeling Goode's thought – by blocking out negative thoughts and distractions, and by "trusting the process and preparation," as he often said.

This kick was the ultimate test.

"I get back, get into my steps, and the crowd is loud. It was intense," he said. "I just remember at that moment locking in. 'This is the line. Let's do this.' I was thinking, 'Just go when the snap comes.'

"It felt good coming off, and as I look up, it's right on line, and the air goes out of the stadium. It's a surreal feeling."

One he hopes to experience again sometime, but without the bittersweetness. He would have relished another chance in overtime in Seattle, but the next one will have to wait.

"I don't usually watch the game footage or replays, but it's one kick I wanted to see on tape – the crowd, the whole situation, the different angles they show," he said. "This one I will hold onto, and when it's all said and done, whenever I'm done playing, I'll look back and say, 'That was a cool moment.'" ■■■

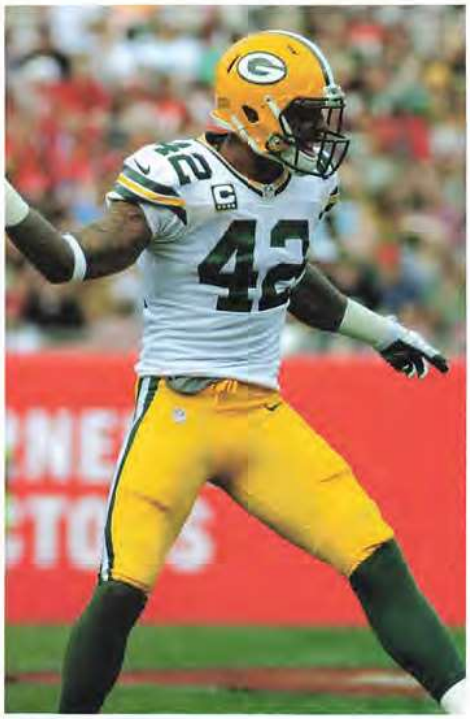
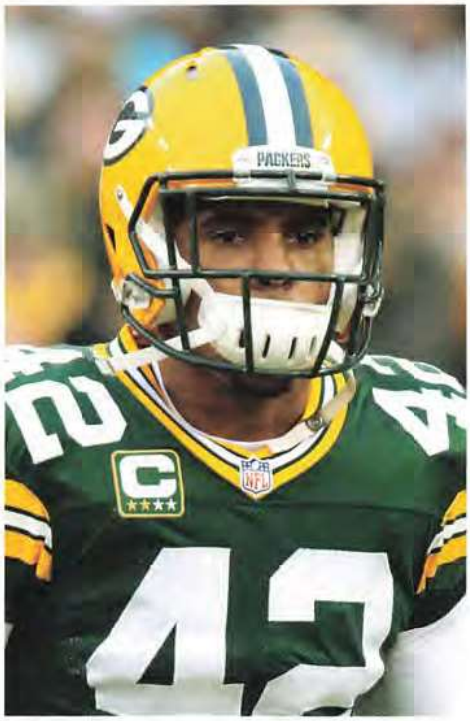
Burnett provides quiet, steady leadership for entire defense

By Ryan Hartwig | packers.com





For those on the outside looking in, Morgan Burnett might not be the first name that comes to mind when thinking of the Packers' defensive leaders.

He's not the most experienced (see Julius Peppers) or most decorated (see Peppers and Clay Matthews) player on that side of the ball. He's certainly not the loudest (see Mike Daniels) or most intense (probably Daniels again) player, either.

Instead, the soft-spoken, 26-year-old safety operates the way his parents, Cap and Ellary, taught him to while raising him in College Park, Ga.: "Lead by example and let your work do the talking."

Message received.

Inside the Packers' locker room, Burnett's status as a leader is unquestioned, evidenced by the fact that he was elected as one of Green Bay's six playoff captains in 2014 for the second year in a row. While he had been in that position before, getting recognized by his peers was equally humbling the second time around.

"I really didn't know coming into the team meeting," Burnett said. "It's a big honor. Outside of our locker room, no one else's opinions really matter. You want to get the respect from your teammates. Those are your brothers you go out on the field with, and to be elected team captain by them, that really meant a lot to me and it's something I'm really going to cherish for the rest of my life."

> "I think it says a lot about Morgan Burnett.
> TO SEE ONE OF YOUR YOUNG PLAYERS RISE TO THAT LEVEL OF CREDIBILITY IS WHAT YOU'RE LOOKING FOR."
> -Head Coach Mike McCarthy, on Burnett's election as playoff captain

In addition to garnering the respect of his teammates, Burnett's lead-by-example approach has also caught the attention of Head Coach Mike McCarthy.

"I think it says a lot about Morgan Burnett," McCarthy said following the captains announcement in Week 16 last season. "Being a young team, to see one of your young players rise to that level of credibility is what you're looking for."

While MVP signal-caller Aaron Rodgers guides the offensive side of the ball, Burnett is considered the "quarterback of the defense," handling the majority of the communication duties.

Although being vocal isn't his forte, he's not afraid to do whatever it takes to get his point across. Fellow defensive back Micah Hyde even described Burnett as a "vocal leader" when referring to his powerful presence in the meeting room shortly after last season's captains vote.

"Pretty much anyone around here can tell you I'm not the most talkative guy," Burnett said. "But I step up and speak when it's needed."

In addition to bolstering his role as a leader in 2014, Burnett also turned in one of his most productive seasons on the field since being selected by the Packers in the third round of the 2010 NFL Draft. The safety out of Georgia Tech started and played in 15 regular-season games in 2014, finishing with a team-best 125 tackles – the second most of his career (137 in 2012). He also had 1½ sacks, an interception, a forced fumble and a fumble recovery, while adding two sacks and another interception in the playoffs.

He contributed to Green Bay's No. 1 league ranking in turnover margin (plus-14) and was part of a defense that ranked 10th in the NFL against the pass.

With the loss of several defensive veterans this past offseason – including fellow secondary players Tramon Williams, Davon House and Jarrett Bush – Burnett's role as a leader is arguably more important now than ever before. That said, Burnett doesn't feel any added pressure.

"You stick to your characteristics," Burnett said. "That's what got everyone here is their own individual style, so you just stick to that and try not to do anything out of your norm."

The departures in the secondary created a need at the cornerback position heading into 2015, which the Packers addressed with their top two draft picks, Damarious Randall and Quinten Rollins. As the general of the defensive backfield, Burnett knows he'll be called upon to help them, along with several other Packers newcomers, make a smooth transition from college to the pros.

"I just really tell them in the NFL you have to keep an even-keel mindset," Burnett said. "You can't get too high or get too low. You've got to take advantage of every practice and find ways to keep getting better with every practice. Practice leads to confidence, and when you have confidence you go into the games not thinking, but just reacting."

It's similar to the advice he received as a young player from former Packers veterans.

"When I was coming up it was Nick Collins, Charlie Peprah and Tramon Williams," Burnett said. "Then just watching guys like Charles Woodson, watching the way they work. Nick and Charlie took me under their wings and they were very helpful. Nick still helps me out to this day."

Burnett is paying it forward with the goal of helping the Packers top their successful 2014 campaign in which they went 12-4, won a fourth consecutive NFC North title and were within a play or two of advancing to their first Super Bowl since Burnett's injury-shortened rookie season.

"Last year is last year. This year's team is a different team, and we can't ride off last year's success. We have to build our own identity, start from scratch and find ways to accomplish greatness," he said.

"Our goals are high, and we're going to do everything we can to achieve those goals. It's a long process. We know it's going to take time, but we know we can get there."

THE BEST OFFENSIVE LINE OF THE McCARTHY ERA RETURNS ALL FIVE STARTERS

By Paul Imig | Fox Sports Wisconsin

Mike McCarthy set the bar high before the 2014 season by proclaiming that the Packers' offensive line should be the best one he ever coached. It was a bold statement, but the players backed it up and lived up to the hype.

Now, McCarthy believes the fivesome has even more to offer.

"I think the offensive line is going to be better," McCarthy said during offseason workouts. "I really do."

With Bryan Bulaga re-signed, Green Bay has its same starting offensive line back for the 2015 season. It's the continuity built over the past year that has McCarthy – and everyone else associated with the group – feeling like there's still a lot of room to grow.

This offseason, the Packers' linemen watched every snap from last year. They analyzed the good and the bad. Their conclusion was that the offensive line was at its best in the second half of 2014.

To be the NFL's top offensive line, though, is going to require significant improvement.

"I think everybody realizes that we still have a lot of work to do if we want to be the best unit in the league," right guard T.J. Lang said. "And you can't stay the same. You've got to get better."

For Lang and fellow guard Josh Sitton, getting better is certainly possible. But the two of them already form as dominant an interior duo as any offensive line could hope for. Even dealing with injuries throughout the final couple months of last season, Sitton and Lang consistently turned in strong performances.

Bulaga established himself as one of the league's premier right tackles and was paid accordingly with a new multi-year contract as free agency began.

Barring injury, there's little reason to expect Lang, Sitton or Bulaga – who range in age from 26 to 29 – to take a step back at this stage of their careers. If the three of them have reached their ceilings as individual players, then any major improvement on the offensive line likely hinges on the other two starters, left tackle David Bakhtiari and center Corey Linsley.

Bakhtiari enters his third NFL season and retains his critical role as the blind-side protector of quarterback Aaron Rodgers.

"I don't want to be a left tackle, I want to be the left tackle," Bakhtiari said. "There's a chip on your shoulder that you have to have. There's a chip on mine that will never go away. I'll always want more. It sounds selfish, but in my life and how I view everything I want, I'm still going to be climbing, trying to get something else."

Lang described Bakhtiari as a player who's both on the rise and reliable. "He's one of the guys that continues to get better," Lang said. "He's a guy that we can count on."

Linsley will be in his second year and has the important task of getting the ball to Rodgers on every offensive play. The big difference for Linsley in 2015 is actually getting an offseason to work directly with Rodgers. As a rookie, Linsley didn't take over the starting job until after the third preseason game when JC Tretter sustained a knee injury.

"Corey is the same type of guy (like Bakhtiari) who is very, very accountable to his teammates," offensive line coach James Campen said. "We fully expect him to make that progression, no question."

This will be the first time in five seasons that Rodgers won't have to get used to a new starting center. Given the late change at that position before the 2014 regular season, though, Rodgers is only allowing himself to be cautiously optimistic on that topic.

There's a lot of competition within the offensive line room. When they're not teaming up as a cappella singers in "Pitch Perfect 2," they all strive to keep pace with one another on the football field.

None of them ever wants to be the weak link of the group.

"I would be ignorant to say that I'm not thinking like, 'Ah, Bryan hasn't given up a sack, I better not give up a sack,'" Bakhtiari said. "Same thing, I bet Josh and T.J. have an unconscious competition level with each other. And even Corey, he's like, 'No one around here is (messing) up, I better not (mess) this up. I don't want to be that guy.'

> "No one wants to be the one that does something to be a detriment to a single play. I think that competitiveness is great. You want to create a competitive environment.
> WHEN THEY INTERNALLY DO THAT, THAT'S A GOOD THING."
> -Offensive line coach James Campen

"No one wants to be that guy. It's not a scared thing. You're almost held up to a higher standard, as well, amongst your peers. We know what we're capable of, and we know we have to go out there and execute it and continue to achieve and strive to be better."

Campen encourages his players to push each other in that manner.

"No one wants to be the one that does something to be a detriment to a single play," Campen said. "I think that competitiveness is great. You want to create a competitive environment. When they internally do that, that's a good thing."

Ultimately, Rodgers believes the group's health will be the determining factor in whether the offensive line once again turns McCarthy's prediction into reality.

Another Pro Bowl season from Sitton would help, too. So would Lang and Bulaga locking down the right side of the line. A jump in development from Bakhtiari and Linsley could put Green Bay over the top and into the conversation as the NFL's elite offensive line.

But even if they achieve that level of success, don't expect any of them to be overly thrilled about it.

"Being the best isn't even good enough," Bakhtiari said. "There's always room to improve on every little thing. Put it all together, our goal is to go in there and play fundamental Packer football."

A Change for the BETTER

Peppers' presence opens door to Matthews' mobility

By Weston Hodkiewicz | Green Bay Press-Gazette

Clay Matthews admittedly had his reservations at first.

The Green Bay outside linebacker had only played one position during his five-plus seasons in Dom Capers' defense and he'd played it well to the tune of four Pro Bowl appearances.

However, everyone was in agreement that something needed to change after the Packers gave up nearly 500 total yards in a 44-23 loss to the New Orleans Saints. The defense needed a spark. Head Coach Mike McCarthy and Capers believed Matthews was it.

The suggestion was made to shift Matthews inside to help solidify the defense, especially against the run where it was giving up more than 150 yards per game. Although Matthews only had a "patchwork" understanding of the nuances of the position, his athleticism and knowledge of the defense took care of the rest.

The Packers unveiled the look against Chicago on Nov. 9. Matthews had a career-high 11 tackles and a sack in the 55-14 thrashing of the Bears. What had been an up-and-down season for the defense had reached its turning point.

"I think anytime somebody asks you to make a position change, you're going to be very reluctant about it, especially when you've had success for several years at that position," Matthews said. "But you've got to get your feet wet and on Sunday night football (against Chicago) I got 'em wet. Moving forward, I kind of built off the success that our defense had as well as myself and we really had a good thing going all the way through the playoffs."

The Packers finished 15th in total defense and halved their yards allowed against the run in the second half of the season. Matthews' production also picked up. He had 8½ sacks in the final eight games compared to 2½ to start the season.

Such a drastic measure would have been difficult to facilitate in the past. With Matthews the catalyst of the Packers' pass rush, the idea of repositioning him inside in previous years likely would have resulted in an even larger void on the edge.

Not last year. The signing of eight-time Pro Bowler Julius Peppers gave the defense the every-down threat opposite Matthews that it lacked in the past. The 34-year-old pass rusher provided the necessary versatility and productivity to allow the Packers to get creative.

Capers had an idea of what to expect with Peppers. He nearly drafted him in 2002 when he was the head coach of the expansion Houston Texans. However, you never can be too sure about something until you see it on the field.

What the Packers witnessed was a spry veteran who proved to be a difference-maker. Peppers' transition to a 3-4 scheme was seamless in recording 45 tackles, seven sacks, four forced fumbles and two INTs returned for TDs in the regular season.

"I didn't know last year (what to expect) coming in, but he had a big impact," Capers said. "He was by far the best guy we've had come in and play on the other side since we've been here. We moved him around. He's smart. Certainly didn't play like a 34-year-old guy. He still has great flexibility and he's a rare athlete for a guy that size."

Now, Matthews and Peppers are the embodiment of the direction Capers and McCarthy want to take the Packers' defense – versatile playmakers who aren't handcuffed to a set position.

Matthews, fresh off his fifth Pro Bowl appearance, worked at both inside and outside linebacker posts during the offseason. He reiterated how important it is for both him and the Packers' defense to get off to faster starts this season.

The development of Sam Barrington means the Packers can be flexible in how they utilize Matthews this season despite letting go of A.J. Hawk and Brad Jones. That excites Capers, who would like to increase the unpredictability of when Matthews is lining up inside.

"He's doing well at adjusting. He did it last year," said Peppers of Matthews. "Just having a whole offseason to try to get his feet on the ground and learn the playbook, and not just being tossed in there mid-season, I think he's going to adapt to it and perform well."

Wherever Matthews lines up, the Packers are confident in their lot on the outside with veterans Mike Neal and Nick Perry under contract for one more season. Former undrafted free agents Jayrone Elliott and Andy Mulumba are also looking to take another step.

The linchpin remains Peppers. Although he turned 35 in January, there's optimism the 6-foot-7, 287-pound rusher can continue to play at a high level. He's missed only six of a possible 208 regular-season games in his 13-year career.

Peppers didn't miss a practice open to the media in his first year with the Packers. He wasn't plagued by any of the soft-tissue injuries you often see veteran players battle. So the worst injury he's suffered?

"MCL sprain in Chicago three or four years ago," Peppers said. "I didn't miss any games, I just played through it."

Matthews says he's excited about the potential of his expanded role in the Packers' defense. His rover responsibilities mimic how Capers used Charles Woodson during Green Bay's run to the Super Bowl during the 2010 season.

It's no secret Matthews likes getting after the quarterback. He considers it an "art form," but he's learned there are other ways to rush besides coming off the edge. Interior attacks are the trademark of Mike Zimmer's defense in Minnesota, which routinely utilizes the double-A gap blitz to challenge interior linemen.

Capers has experimented with deploying Matthews inside. This year, the Packers believe the possibilities are endless for the defense with Matthews at the peak of his powers and Peppers back for a second year.

"I've talked to Clay a couple times early in the offseason program," McCarthy said. "I've been in the meetings that he goes to. He's moving around and he wants to make sure he has a clear understanding of the new things we're doing from every perspective."

McCarthy then deadpanned: "Inside linebacker, outside linebacker, I mean, wait until you see him play nose guard. That's going to be really cool."

A Season FOR THE AGES

IN 2014, NELSON-COBB WR DUO MADE HISTORY

By Bill Huber | Packer Report

Uncoverable.
Unstoppable.
Unprecedented.

Those three words sum up the brilliant seasons turned in by receivers Jordy Nelson and Randall Cobb in 2014.

Nelson more than earned the four-year contract extension he signed last year at the start of training camp by producing one of the truly great seasons of all-time, with his 98 catches going for a franchise-record 1,519 yards and 13 touchdowns.

Cobb more than earned the four-year contract he was given this year just before the start of free agency by contributing 91 receptions for 1,287 yards and 12 touchdowns.

They became the first duo in NFL history to record 90-plus receptions, 1,200-plus yards and 12-plus touchdowns in the same season and the first tandem in Packers' history with 90-plus receptions each.

Their combined production of 189 receptions, 2,806 yards and 25 TDs was tops in team history in all three categories and represented 54.2 percent of the completions, 63.1 percent of the yards and 65.8 percent of the touchdowns for the Packers'

No. 1-ranked scoring offense. Taking those three percentages into account, they were the most productive wide receiver duo in the league.

"I think the relationship Randall and Jordy have, both personal and professional, on the field, off the field, is part of their success," Head Coach Mike McCarthy said. "They complement each other in the fact that they're two totally different players (in) how they're utilized, their expertise in the offense. They're excellent leaders. They definitely feed off each other, compete, push each other, and that's how it's been for a couple of years."

In this era of spread-the-field, throw-it-all-the-time offenses, they are the modern equivalent of the famous Army running back duo of Felix "Doc" Blanchard and Glenn Davis — aka "Mr. Inside" and "Mr. Outside."

While he's expanded his horizons as his career has progressed, Cobb is "Mr. Inside" with his dominant performance when lined up in the slot. According to ProFootballFocus.com, Cobb caught 75 passes for 1,067 yards and 12 TDs in the slot. That's 11 more receptions, 232 more yards and four more scores than any other slot player in the NFL. Regardless of where he lined up, Cobb forced 18 missed tackles and had 603 yards after the catch, figures that ranked third and fourth, respectively, among receivers, according to PFF.

"Randall Cobb is an incredible teammate, a great leader," two-time MVP quarterback Aaron Rodgers said. "He's really improved his game. Obviously, last year was an important year for him, being a contract year, and he came out and put pressure on himself to succeed and he met and exceeded his own expectations, which are very high. He plays with a lot of confidence and does a lot of things for us."

Nelson has become one of the NFL's ultimate big-play targets. Doing most of his damage from the outside, Nelson had a league-high five touchdown receptions of 50-plus yards last season.

He ranked fifth among receivers with 558 yards after the catch, according to PFF, with a big chunk of those coming on those long touchdowns.

"He's very athletic. He can run all the routes needed outside," Rodgers said. "He's big-bodied and can go up and get the ball. But he's also agile enough and quick enough to be in the slot and make some plays there. So, he has all the tools you want in a receiver.

"He has great body control. He's intelligent. His success has not been a surprise; it's been year after year. The work he puts in and the consistency speaks for itself. His approach is very meticulous and his preparation's incredible."

Nelson and Cobb combined for 43 catches of at least 20 yards and 11 for at least 40 yards in 2014. As a team, they would have tied for seventh in the league in 40-yard receptions. They delivered in the key moments, with each turning 24 third-down receptions into first downs — tied for third in the league. Cobb tied for the league lead with six touchdowns on third down and led the league outright with 10 red-zone TDs.

With the emergence of second-year receiver Davante Adams and the potential of a deeper pass-catching corps with youngsters Richard Rodgers, Jeff Janis, Jared Abbrederis and Ty Montgomery, Cobb knows he might not duplicate last year's production.

"It's going to be hard," Cobb said. "I look forward to this receiving corps. We have a great offense. We have a lot of weapons. Us spreading the ball out, it's going to be hard to top what I did last year, but my mindset is always to score every time I touch the ball. I'm going to do the best I can every time I touch it."

In 2014, the Packers led the NFL in scoring for the second time in the McCarthy era, also doing so in 2011. With Rodgers under contract through 2019 and his dynamic receiving duo slated to be in Green Bay through 2018, the Packers should field a prolific offense for at least the next few years.

Not that that's on Nelson's mind.

"It means hopefully we'll be here, but it's what we need to do about it while we're here," Nelson said. "It's not just the three of us. There's plenty of guys who are going to be here and have opportunities to make plays. Everyone in this (locker) room understands that we're about winning. End of story.

"It can be a lot of pressure on guys coming in understanding the level we've been at and the next step we need (to reach) to be consistent at winning the big games, and taking that extra step we weren't able to make last year. So, it's on everyone in here." ■■■

ALWAYS INTENSE, NEVER SATISFIED

Growing into D-line leader, Daniels backs up words with work habits that are 'second-to-none'

By Ryan Wood | Green Bay Press-Gazette

Mike Daniels sat at his locker after the final regular-season game late last season, scrolling through his phone. His helmet and shoulder pads were off, but a shower could wait.

Daniels had just clinched the Green Bay Packers' win against the Detroit Lions in the NFC North title game with a fourth-quarter sack, but he wasn't looking for praise. He wanted the opposite. Daniels basked in social media's negativity. Every piece of criticism fueled him.

It's a piece of Daniels' personality that may never go away. Entering the final season of his four-year rookie contract, Daniels has developed into the Packers' best defensive lineman – but never mind that.

ALWAYS LOOKING AHEAD

The former fourth-round pick is still searching to prove doubters wrong, still working to get better. Daniels said he isn't satisfied yet, despite his success.

"It's a process of growth," Daniels said, "and every year I feel like I'm growing and improving. That's my goal, is to get better. That's what it is, man. Just keep getting better. The closest I can get to playing perfect, the better. If I'm more perfect this game than I was last game, then I'm moving forward.

"I have a direction in which I'm going, and it's forward. I think that's simple. As long as you're moving forward, you're only going to get better."

Daniels, naturally introspective, understands the doubts that have followed him ever since his days at Iowa. Even now, he admits there's "nothing that looks good" about the way he plays. Other pass rushers are flashier, he said. They have more skills, more "karate chop" moves.

Daniels is shorter than most at 6-foot, and smaller than many at 305 pounds. Never mind that, too. He's overcome a lack of ideal size to develop into one of the most productive players on the Packers' defense, leading the defensive line in sacks and tackles the past two seasons.

His numbers aren't huge when compared to league leaders – Daniels has 12 sacks and 64 solo tackles the past two years – but his balance between rushing the passer and defending the run stands out. He's a well-rounded defensive end, a complete player.

Daniels said the key is his work ethic.

"Just going you-know-what to the wall every single play," Daniels said, "and playing with great fundamentals every single play. Thinking about what I have to do and focusing and locking in every single play. That can be mentally taxing, but at the same time it's what's necessary for me to be able to play the way I play."

Daniels' approach to the game is what coaches appreciate. He is always battling in the trenches. Each snap, he hustles to the whistle.

Defensive line coach Mike Trgovac raves about Daniels' motor. For Trgovac, Daniels represents an ideal example for all young defensive linemen entering the NFL.

> "You already know the pain you're going to get. You already know the exhaustion. You already know how hard it's going to be.
> WHEN YOU'RE PREPARED FOR THAT, THEN YOU CAN ATTACK ANY TASK ON THE FIELD."
> -Mike Daniels

"First of all," Trgovac said, "Mike is a good football player, but one of the biggest things with Mike is his offseason preparation and his preparation for every game. Just the way he comes to practice, and the habits he's been able to form, has been tremendous. It's for every young player coming into the league to study. That's the way you should do it, and that's the way you should approach it. He takes it very seriously. It means a lot to him. I don't anticipate him ever having a drop-off.

"I think the preparation he puts into it, the habits he's been able to develop, are really in my opinion second-to-none."

It's important for every player to have a high motor. That doesn't mean every player has one.

Daniels' work ethic, his endless preparation, is more of a rarity than the norm. His intensity comes out of necessity, he said. There's a certain way Daniels believes he has to play if he's going to succeed, and that's max effort on every snap.

"I think it just comes down to a decision," Daniels said, "and knowing that it's going to be hard. If you go into every game knowing, 'This is going to be extremely difficult if I play the way I'm supposed to play,' then you'll be prepared for it. It simplifies things. It doesn't make it easier, but it simplifies things because you already know what to expect.

"You already know the pain you're going to get. You already know the exhaustion. You already know how hard it's going to be. When you're prepared for that, then you can attack any task on the field."

Daniels was a leader before last season began. When the Packers chose not to retain defensive linemen Johnny Jolly and Ryan Pickett in free agency a year ago, it made room for Daniels to take a more substantial role as a vocal leader.

But words only mean so much if they're not backed up with production. After proving himself on the field, Daniels admitted he has more credibility. In his contract year, he's ready for an even bigger role not just on the field, but also in the locker room.

"I think I've done some things that I can show (teammates)," Daniels said. "Lead by example that, 'Hey, this is what's worked for me. I don't see why it wouldn't work for you. And if it doesn't, I'll help you find what works for you.'

"Every year I'm getting older, I'm getting wise. I'm getting more experience, and I want to share that expanded knowledge with all of my teammates."

SEAHAWKS 36
PACKERS 16

CenturyLink Field,
Thursday, Sept. 4, 2014

Marshawn Lynch scored twice and gained 110 of Seattle's 207 rushing yards as the Packers dropped their season opener for the third straight year.

A knee injury to starting RT Bryan Bulaga slowed down Green Bay's up-tempo offense, which managed only one touchdown until midway through the fourth quarter.

PACKERS 31
JETS* 24

Lambeau Field,
Sunday, Sept. 14, 2014

Jordy Nelson's career-high 209 receiving yards helped the Packers overcome a 21-3 second-quarter deficit.

An interception by Tramon Williams helped the Packers pull within one score by halftime, and then Aaron Rodgers hit Nelson for an 80-yard TD pass to break a 24-all tie late in the third quarter.

PACKERS 26
Patriots 21

Lambeau Field,
Sunday, Nov. 30, 2014

	1	2	3	4	Total
New England Patriots	0	14	0	7	21
Green Bay Packers	13	10	0	3	26

Jordy Nelson's 45-yard catch-and-run for a score just before halftime and a huge, 121-yard receiving effort from rookie Davante Adams lifted the Packers over the AFC's top team.

Mike Daniels and Mike Neal combined on a key fourth-quarter sack that preceded a missed field goal by the Patriots, and Aaron Rodgers' third-down conversion pass to Randall Cobb in the waning moments sealed the game.

PACKERS 43
FALCONS 37

Lambeau Field.
Monday, Dec. 8, 2014

The Packers overcame a monster 259-yard receiving night from Atlanta's Julio Jones, who almost singlehandedly brought the Falcons back from a 24-point halftime deficit.

Jordy Nelson's 60-yard TD reception early in the fourth quarter and James Starks' 41-yard run late helped the Packers hang on.

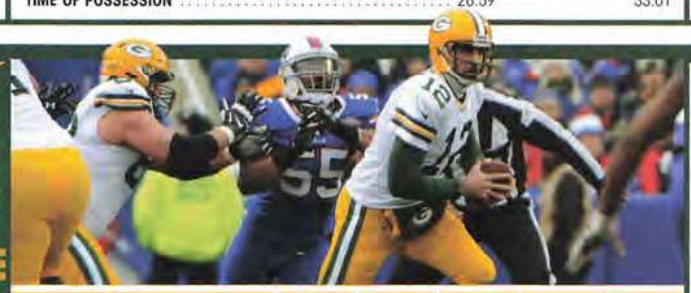
BILLS 21
PACKERS 13

Ralph Wilson Stadium,
Sunday, Dec. 14, 2014



Green Bay's five-game winning streak was snapped as Marcus Thigpen returned a punt 75 yards for a TD for the Bills, and the Packers' last chance on offense ended with a sack and safety.

Buffalo held Aaron Rodgers to just a 40.5 percent completion rate (17 of 42), his lowest ever as a starting QB.

With the NFC North title and a first-round playoff bye on the line, the Packers took an early lead on Micah Hyde's second punt-return TD of the season and then needed Aaron Rodgers to play through a painful calf injury in the second half.

Rodgers injured his calf on a 4-yard TD pass to Randall Cobb in the second quarter and headed to the locker room. He returned in the third quarter to chants of "M-V-P! M-V-P!" from the Lambeau Field faithful and promptly led the Packers on two touchdown drives.

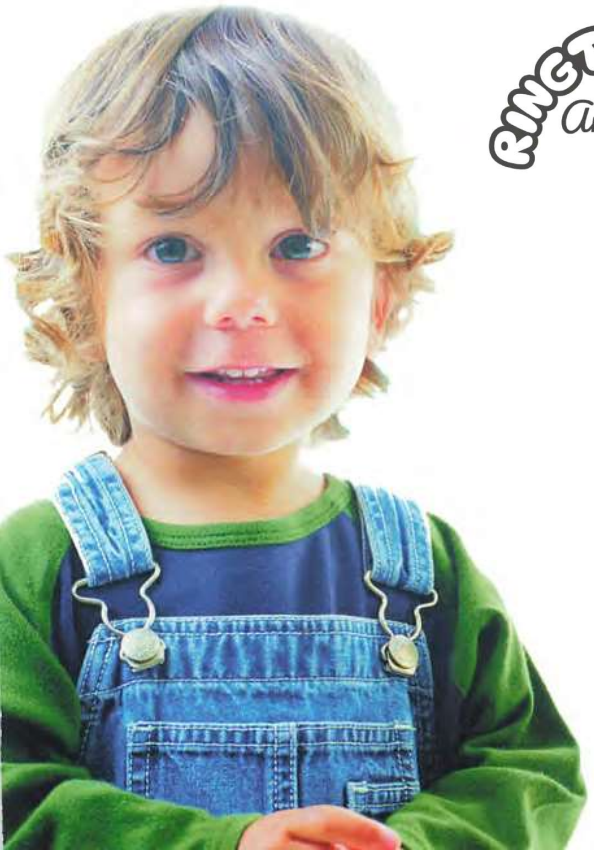
CATAN®

The game to play off the field.

92% reaches the kids. 100% reaches your heart.



RINGTHEBELL.TV on Archive.org

When 92% of each dollar goes directly to programs, you are making some child's life more bearable.

When you take their minds off pain and refocus it on adventure, they suddenly realize there's more to life than illness.

When you help build, donate or equip retreat and hospital housing for these children, you speed their recovery and restore some sense of normalcy to shattered families.

When kids believe in tomorrow they are that much closer to having one.

THE HEART OF YOUR GAME

With the interceptions that life throws you, you need one adaptable device that can do it all. Acer's One 10 hits this sweet spot by switching between laptop, tablet, display screen and tent modes in a flash. The magnetic hinge design makes it easy to attach or detach the tablet from the keyboard so you can dig into work or catch up on your fantasy team.

Second-half TD passes to rookies Davante Adams and Richard Rodgers brought the Packers from behind, and a controversial call on the Cowboys' fourth-down pass to receiver Dez Bryant late in the fourth quarter decided the first Green Bay-Dallas postseason game at Lambeau Field since the Ice Bowl.

With four minutes left, Bryant thought he had caught a deep ball over Sam Shields while crashing to the turf at the Green Bay 1-yard line, but after a replay review, the officials determined he hadn't completed the process of the catch.

The Packers squandered a 12-point lead in the final four minutes of regulation and then lost on the first possession of overtime as Seattle's Russell Wilson hit Jermaine Kearse for a game-winning 35-yard TD.

A fake field goal for a TD and an onside kick recovery helped rally the Seahawks, whose momentum was thwarted only momentarily when Mason Crosby drilled a 48-yard field goal with 14 seconds left in the fourth quarter to force overtime.

Throughout your career, who has been your favorite receiver to throw to?
I've had a lot of good ones. I don't have to look further than this locker room to see a lot of good ones.

What was your least favorite subject in school?
Math. I was more of a qualitative guy than quantitative.

Where is your favorite place to snowboard?
Lots of good spots, but the best place I've been to is Mammoth Mountain out in California.

What football player did you idolize growing up?
I truly don't know if there's been one guy. There's been a lot of good quarterbacks that I've looked up to.

What was the biggest lesson you learned from your internship with Merrill Lynch?
It was an awesome experience. I learned a lot about money management. It was almost like an extra finance course.

What is the best food you've ever tried while on the road?
Chicken is always my favorite.

What Packers player can eat the most?
Eddie Lacy.

What was your most memorable run?
Probably my rookie year, we played Chicago and went to the championship. I scored my first touchdown.

Who is your favorite music artist?
I don't really have a favorite. I like a lot of different artists.

What is one thing that most people do not know about you?
I can draw.

What is the most interesting pregame ritual that you've seen in the locker room?
Josh Sitton brushes his hair for like 20 minutes straight when he's nervous for a game.

In high school you were a four-sport athlete. Other than football, which was your favorite to play?
I really enjoyed all of the sports I played, I guess. Track and field was kind of fun, because it was outside of the box from everything else I played. That was the only individual sport I played, so I think there was a greater sense of intensity.

What was the most interesting thing that a fan has asked you to sign?
One time I had to sign a stuffed bear that some guy shot. He wanted me to sign it, so I did.

What Packers player can eat the most?
I am going to say probably T.J. Lang. One time I watched him eat an entire large pizza from Sgambati's.

Besides Lambeau Field, which NFL stadium is the most fun to play in?
No place matches Lambeau's intensity on gameday. I enjoy going to a lot of different stadiums. I would probably say my favorite other than Lambeau would be AT&T Stadium down in Texas. We've got some really good memories down there – the Super Bowl and the largest comeback in team history.

Who is the best-dressed player on the team?
I like Randall Cobb's style. He can dress pretty well. Sam Shields' style is kind of different than everybody. I'd go with one of those two and also include myself.

What is your favorite travel destination?
Key West. I love Key West. It's beautiful down there. I can be on the water all day, jet ski, and things like that.

What music artist have you been listening to the most lately?
I'm a Jeezy fan, so a lot of Jeezy. Right now I've been listening to some Rich Homie Quan, Lucci from Atlanta, and can't forget about Future.

If you could guest star on any television show, which would you choose?
Probably "Fresh Prince." You can't go wrong with Will Smith. They call me young Denzel anyway.

What is your most important pregame ritual?
Throw Young Jeezy on the iPod and get a good stretch in.

What was your favorite NFL team growing up?
I'm from Duval County, in Jacksonville, Fla., so it was the Jaguars. Fred Taylor, Mark Brunell, Tony Boselli.

Which Packers player has the least fashion sense?
I can't call him out. It would have to be Datone Jones or … Datone Jones.

What was your first car?
Pontiac J 2000, it was 1979 and it was $500. I just rolled through all the back roads.

If you were stranded on an island and could have one teammate with you, who would you take?
I would take Davante Adams. You want to know why? 'Cause all of the food and stuff that we need to eat is in the trees and that boy can jump.

How did you choose to go to South Florida for college?
That's another interesting story. I was going on my visit and we called him "Double R" – Coach Rich Rachel – and he picked me up from the airport. But at the time, the area by the airport was going through construction and he accidently took me on the causeway to St. Pete. Anyone who's been down there, once you see that water you got to fall in love. And I love the water. So once I considered that and the guys they were bringing in and the coaching staff, it was an easy decision.

Do you have a pregame ritual?
Sort of, but not really. I come into the locker room, and I do everything the same way every single time, so if that's a ritual, then yeah.

What is your favorite cereal?
I'm just going to have to collect the whole General Mills population of cereal, because I love cereal.

What is your favorite book?
I read a lot of Joel Osteen. I don't have a favorite book by him, but he's a favorite author.

What is your favorite pair of Jordans that you own?
I've got about 400 pairs of Jordans, but if I had to pick one out of all of them I would have to say the red and black 12s.

Is there a television series that you are currently hooked on?
I watch about eight TV shows. They're spaced out Monday through Thursday. What's on right now? "iZombie."

Who is the best-dressed coach on the staff?
The best-dressed coach on the staff? Um, Jason Simmons.

Who is your favorite superhero?
I'm more of a Spiderman or Flash type of guy.

What was the best part about playing in the SEC?
Competition was great. You have some of the best athletes in the league.

What is your favorite board game?
I didn't really have a favorite game, but I was more of a Spades player.

What accomplishment in life are you most proud of?
I would say getting a degree from a higher academic school.

What is your favorite vacation spot?
The Texas Panhandle with a bunch of family. It's just really relaxing. You don't have cell phone service, so you can kind of just get away from the world.

What was the last book you've read?
That would have to be "Letters to Billy."

What is the worst opposing stadium's locker room that you've been in?
Definitely the trips to play the Chicago Bears, the visitors' locker room at Soldier Field.

What is your favorite quote?
You could pretty much take any Vince Lombardi or Phil Jackson quote for that one.

What do you like to do in your free time?
Play the guitar, sit around, and watch TV with my wife.

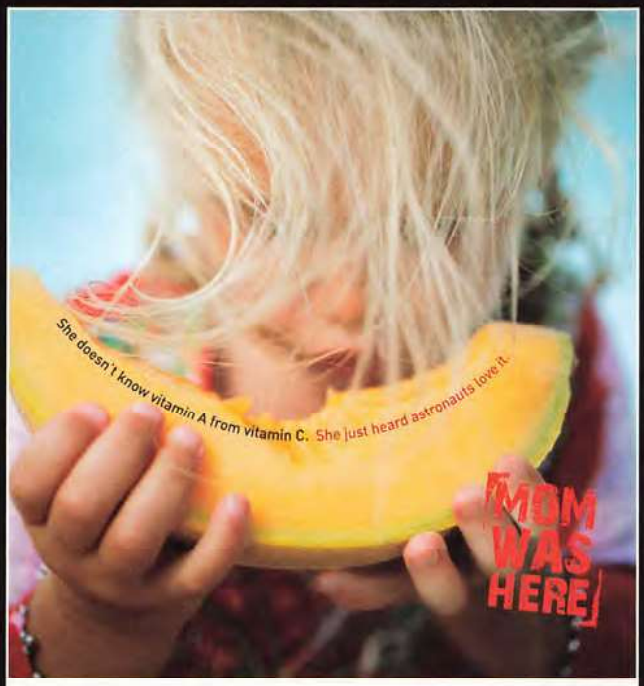
In high school you were a four-sport athlete. If you could've gone pro in any sport besides football, which would you choose?
It would definitely be soccer. I loved all the sports but especially soccer.

Who would you want to play you in a movie about your life?
I'm a huge Matt Damon fan, so I would take Matt Damon.

What Packers player can eat the most?
I've got to say Brett Goode just because I've always made fat jokes about snappers my whole life. That's actually probably not true, but I've got to say Brett.

What are your plans for after you retire?
I'm not sure what I would do. I would love to stay in sports. So that's pretty much all I know.

What is your favorite place that you've visited?
My wife and I both love San Diego, but as far as the international thing, I like Greece. We went to Greece one time and I thought it was pretty cool.



WHAT DOES YOUR CHILD LOVE TO DO?

Think hard. Because connecting her passion to nutrient-rich foods is one great way to encourage healthy eating habits in your child. It's just a little trick that determined, inventive moms across America are using to help raise healthy kids. THE EVOLUTION CONTINUES

New restaurant and Hall of Fame, plus giant Lombardi Trophy, highlight latest Lambeau Field renovations

By Peter Jackel | Racine Journal Times

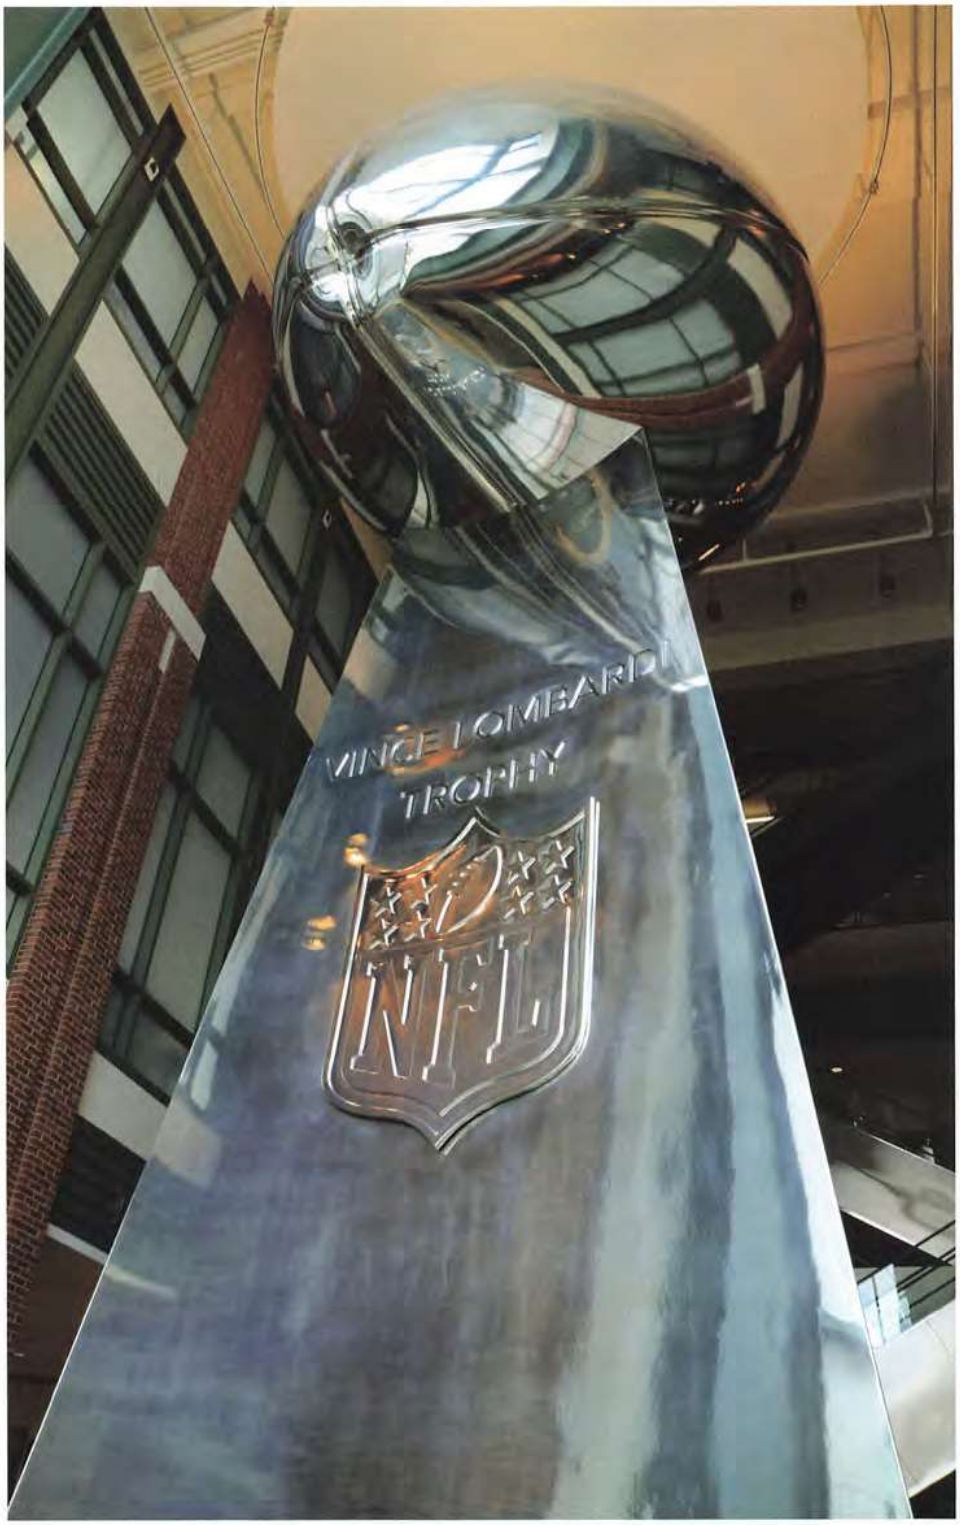
When Packers President/CEO Mark Murphy pulls into his parking space every morning and sizes up the majesty that defines Lambeau Field, he can't help but contemplate how much this iconic venue has evolved.

The sound of progress is in the air as Murphy turns his attention to the renovation of the Atrium on the north end of Lambeau Field. There was a time in the late 1990s when the long-term viability of Vince Lombardi's former stomping grounds was very much in question, but those days are long in the past.

With the latest enhancements, especially a new Hall of Fame and inviting restaurant (goodbye Curly's Pub, hello 1919 Kitchen & Tap), the question of viability has been replaced by just how much more grandiose Lambeau Field can become. There truly appears to be no limit based on what's been going on at 1265 Lombardi Avenue the last several years.

"Obviously, I think we're all a little biased, but it's such an iconic stadium," Murphy said. "And I think we're all so proud that people think so highly of the stadium. It really is amazing. I work here every day and I think we all kind of take it for granted, but when you walk through the Atrium and you meet people who are here for the first time, it really hits home about how special this place is."

The ghosts of Lombardi and Curly Lambeau within the confines of this place resonate more than ever. But with that unmatched history is a great deal of cutting-edge stuff, the likes of which will be in their full glory around the time the preseason schedule opens in August.



So let's imagine Murphy greeting you at the American Family Insurance Gate at the parking lot level on the stadium's east side and taking you on a guided tour. You'll probably already be in awe of the 50-foot-tall replica of the Lombardi Trophy – "It's the largest thing in the world that has ever been chromed," Murphy said – but just wait until you take in what is to come.

Murphy would likely first escort you to the Packers' immensely popular Pro Shop, which is the source of considerable revenue for the team and an unlimited quantity of green-and-gold pride for fans. Architects dreamed up the idea of digging down in front of the Atrium for a new Pro Shop – a concept that captivated Murphy.

"They created a new entrance for the Pro Shop down at the lower level, which has been great," Murphy said. "It gives us twice as much space, it's all on one level and it's much more efficient."

Continue on to the Packers' new Hall of Fame, which will actually be slightly smaller in size than the previous version. But the "wow" factor will be exponentially larger in the new facility, which has been moved from the less-accessible basement to the main floor.

"We took what we learned from the previous Hall of Fame to make sure that it was an operationally efficient layout, as well as a guest-friendly experience where there was no confusion as to which way you are navigating through the space," said Jennifer Ark, the Packers' director of stadium services. "There's also technology of varying levels. I think it will appeal to all ages. It's really an experience about lots of different aspects of the team."

Getting a little hungry? OK, have Murphy guide you from the Hall of Fame to the newly christened 1919 Kitchen & Tap, which was named by combining two ideas from a contest involving Packers employees. The old Curly's Pub was on the second floor, which Murphy saw as a bit of a hassle for customers, and not so intimate with a seating capacity of 500.

The new restaurant will reduce the inside seating capacity to a more cozy 250, but will offer outside seating overlooking the Harlan Plaza for another 100 patrons. Delaware North, which ran Curly's Pub, will also operate 1919 Kitchen & Tap, which will be a gastropub that serves upscale pub food.

"They have hired an executive chef to run the restaurant," Murphy said. "It's got an open kitchen so people will be able to watch the presentation and cooking of the food. And there will be many, many beers on tap and we're going to have copper beer lines so you're going to be able to see the beer coming into the bar.

"The bar area is going to be spectacular. You have a view over the replica of the Lombardi Trophy."

The bottom line is this: A historic stadium that was once in serious danger of not surviving the changing economic climate in the NFL is here to stay.

"I have a monthly column where I take questions," Murphy said, "and one of the questions I got was, 'What are the plans when Lambeau Field needs to be replaced?' Well, our plan is it doesn't have to be replaced. We're going to continue to maintain it and invest in it so we don't have to replace it.

"Our hope is that the fans are going to just love it and it will really create something that will be an attraction for years." ■■■

LOMBARDI PRINCIPLES YIELD CHAMPIONSHIP RESULTS

By Tom Andrews | Packer Report

Character. Dedication. Two words etched deeply on either side of the Green Bay Packers' 1965 championship rings. Two words carefully selected by Vince Lombardi as his lasting, personal tribute to a team that captured the first of three consecutive NFL titles and the ninth in franchise history.

Forging a 10-3-1 regular-season record, Lombardi freely admitted that this may not have been his best Packers team, "but it has the most character," he said at the time. "I think it's got a mark to it. It's got a great deal of perseverance – it never seemed to count itself out."

Green Bay had to scratch and claw for just about everything it got. Yet, somehow, the team found ways to win. Running backs Jim Taylor and Paul Hornung of "Thunder and Lightning" lore sometimes looked more like "Cloud and Drizzle."

The running game posted its worst showing since the days of Scooter McLean. Taylor (734 yards) failed to rush for 1,000 yards for the first time since 1959 while the "Golden Boy," struggling with an injured shoulder, managed only 299. The team's 3.4 yards per attempt was its lowest since 1946.

Often, the Packers lived by the strength of their defense. With pass-rush stalwarts Willie Davis and Henry Jordan leading the charge, Green Bay fielded the league's third-best defense. The unit recorded 44 sacks (ranked third) and 27 interceptions (tied for first), led by the ball-hawking Herb Adderley and Willie Wood (six picks each). When the game was on the line, Lombardi knew his defense would stop opponents in their tracks.

After a 41-9 opening-day laugher at Pittsburgh, the Packers butted heads for the first of three times that year with Don Shula's Baltimore Colts.

The quarterback duels between Bart Starr and Johnny Unitas are the stuff of legend. The two calculating, cerebral field generals called their own plays and always commanded the respect of their teammates and opponents alike.

"They were both great students of the game, and both of them were very good gentlemen," said former Packers receiver and PA announcer Gary Knafelc. "Most quarterbacks, when they get angry they holler at people, and neither one of them did that. In fact, you knew that Bart Starr was really mad at somebody when he would say, 'Hush up!' Most of all, they didn't hurt your team at all. They didn't make mistakes."

In this game, however, Unitas made a big mistake, telegraphing a sideline pass to Raymond Berry. The cagey Adderley sliced in front, picked it off and romped 44 yards to a touchdown.

Starr, meanwhile, was injured in the second half. In the final moments, "Super Sub" Zeke Bratkowski rallied the Packers for the winning touchdown, hitting Max McGee with a 37-yard strike as McGee slipped behind safety Jim Welch. With the clock winding down, Adderley snuffed out Unitas' comeback attempt by recovering a Tom Matte fumble.

An experienced signal-caller with a strong arm, Bratkowski was tremendous as Starr's backup. He was always ready to get into the game no matter the circumstances, and he delivered some of the most crucial victories of the Lombardi Era.

"I knew what my role was and I knew the quality of the team," Bratkowski said. "I watched them in practice, so I didn't want it to be, 'Bratkowski's in there and his cadence is different than Starr's. You might have exchange fumbles.' Or, 'He hasn't warmed up.' I've got to be ready to throw it whether I'm warmed up or not."

In Week 5, Starr produced one of the finest comeback wins of his career. At Tiger Stadium, Detroit jumped out to a 21-3 halftime lead, but Green Bay's offense dramatically came back to life in the second half. Starr shocked the Lions with scoring strikes of 62 yards to Bob Long, 31 yards to Tom Moore and 77 yards to Carroll Dale before scoring himself on a 4-yard run as the Packers won going away, 31-21.

Following the huge victory, Green Bay's offense went into a funk. During a four-game stretch, the Packers scored just 36 points. The quarterbacks failed to throw a single TD pass, but the defense dug in as the Packers managed to beat both the rising Dallas Cowboys and the Los Angeles Rams.

After a pair of victories over the Vikings and a tough loss to the Rams, the Packers once again faced the Colts. To Lombardi's delight, a "Golden Ghost" suddenly emerged amidst the dense fog at Baltimore's Memorial Stadium. Hornung stunned the Colts with five TDs, including passes from Starr of 51 and 65 yards.

Green Bay merely needed a win at San Francisco the following week to clinch the Western Conference title, but stumbled to a 24-24 tie. The Packers found themselves deadlocked with the Colts, setting up the conference playoff game the day after Christmas at Lambeau Field.

Baltimore entered handicapped at quarterback with both Unitas and his backup, Gary Cuozzo, out with injuries. Matte, a halfback who had played some QB in his younger days, had the task of beating Lombardi's Packers – in Green Bay.

He nearly pulled it off.

On the game's first play from scrimmage, Starr threw a short pass to tight end Bill Anderson, who was immediately blasted by defensive back Lenny Lyles. Dazed, Anderson fumbled and linebacker Don Shinnick scooped it up and rumbled 25 yards for the touchdown. Starr, trying to tackle Shinnick, took a crushing blow to his ribs from Welch and was lost for the game.

Shortly before halftime, Lou Michaels added a field goal while the ferocious Colts defense denied Taylor and Hornung the end zone on three straight plays inside the Baltimore 5-yard line. The Packers were down, 10-0. No Bart Starr. Again, it was time for the defense and the "Super Sub" to step up.

In the third quarter, Colts punter Tom Gilburg took a high snap from center and tried to run, but the Packers smothered him at the Baltimore 35. Bratkowski took full advantage, heaving a pass to Dale, who made a circus catch at the one. Hornung burst into the end zone on the following play.

Bratkowski, struggling with two interceptions, maneuvered the offense into position for a tying 22-yard field goal with 1:58 left in regulation. Don Chandler's ensuing kick was perhaps the most controversial of the decade, with the Colts claiming it was wide right. The game became the first in franchise history to head into sudden death.

The overtime went back and forth. Michaels attempted a 43-yard field goal that fell harmlessly short. Bratkowski then rallied the offense and moved the Packers all the way to the Baltimore 18. This time, Chandler's field goal left no doubt and the Packers walked off victorious, 13-10. They would face defending champion Cleveland the following week, wondering if Starr would be available.

Sunday, Jan. 2, 1966. With a muddy mixture of rain and five inches of snow blanketing Lambeau Field, the grounds crew placed red flags along the sidelines as yard markers. The Browns boasted a potent offense led by all-world running back Jim Brown. "There's only one way to stop Jim Brown," quipped Henry Jordan. "Step aside and let Willie Davis do it."

The Packers were more than ready. Starr, his aching ribs tightly taped, threw a 47-yard TD to Dale and was helped by a suddenly rejuvenated Hornung and Taylor, as "Thunder and Lightning" combined for 201 rushing yards. Meanwhile, Jordan, Davis and their mates held Brown to a mere 50 yards in what turned out to be his final career game as the Packers secured a 23-12 win.

Character. Dedication. It was all on display in Green Bay's finest hour.

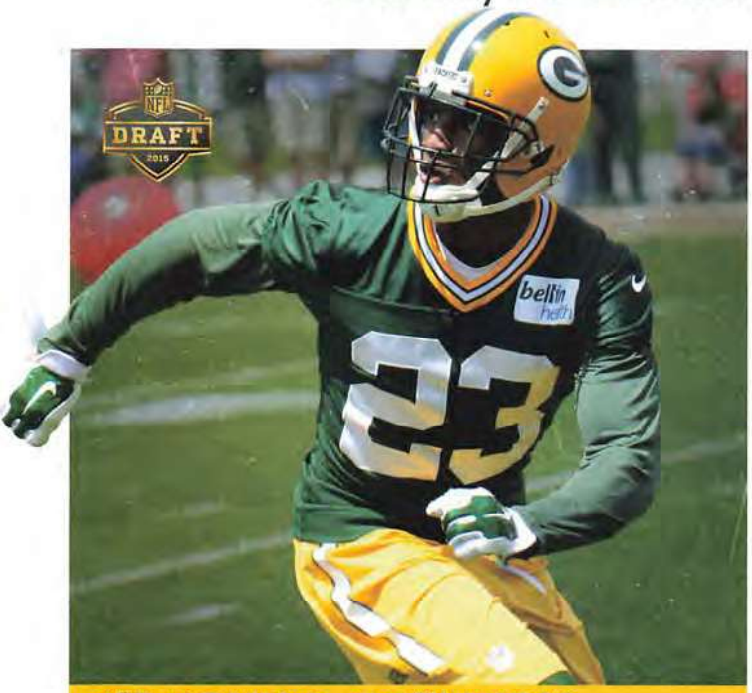
Versatility a theme with newest group of selections



1ST ROUND, 30TH PICK

DAMARIOUS
RANDALL
CB | ARIZONA STATE | 5-11, 196

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:

Named All-Pac-12 last season after averaging 8.2 tackles per game, and 87 solo tackles tied him for fourth all-time among Sun Devil defenders. Had three interceptions, 9.5 tackles for loss, nine pass breakups and two forced fumbles. Played baseball at Butler Community College during the 2010-11 school year before switching back to football at Mesa Community College for a year and then finishing his college career with two years at ASU.

KEY STAT:

Recorded 177 tackles (15 for loss) and six interceptions in two seasons at ASU.

PERSONAL NOTE:

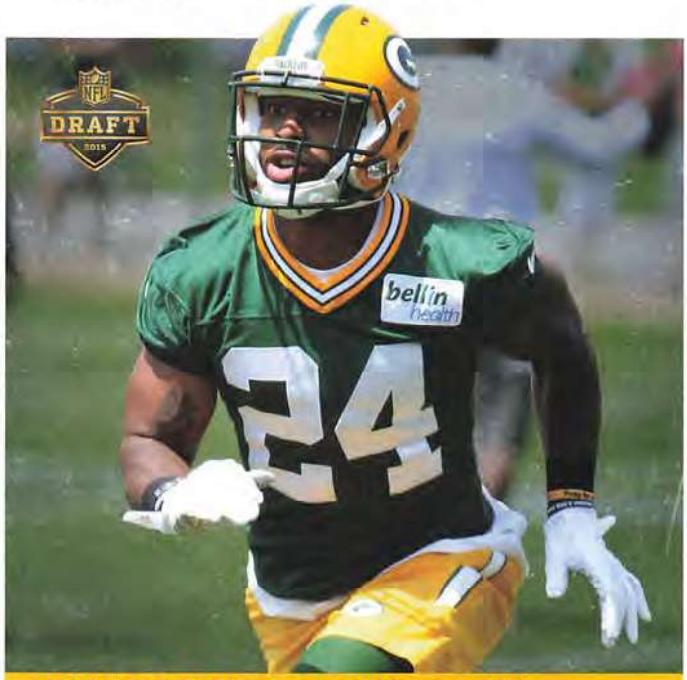
Had one brother drafted by the Kansas City Royals and another brother who played in the Cincinnati Reds' farm system. May have followed in their footsteps had it not been for a shoulder injury in his freshman college season.

OUTLOOK:

Possesses great athleticism and seems to have a knack for being around the ball and making plays. Despite primarily playing safety at ASU due to the team's need there, played a great deal of man-to-man coverage and is projected to play corner for the Packers. His versatility could allow him to play multiple positions in the secondary.

WHAT'S BEEN SAID:

"He would've been our best corner but we needed him more at safety. He's a great football player. Not only just a great player but character-wise, work ethic-wise. He's smart, he's tough and he's talented." – Chris Ball, Arizona St. co-defensive coordinator and safeties coach



2ND ROUND, 62ND PICK

QUINTEN
ROLLINS
CB | MIAMI (OHIO) | 5-11, 195

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:

After accumulating eight forced turnovers, 16 passes defensed and 72 tackles, was named 2014 Mid-American Conference Defensive Player of the Year and first-team All-MAC. Four-year starter for the Miami (Ohio) basketball team. Played in 116 basketball games and finished second in school history in steals (214) and fourth in assists (391) at point guard.

KEY STAT:

Had seven interceptions last year in his only season of college football.

PERSONAL NOTE:

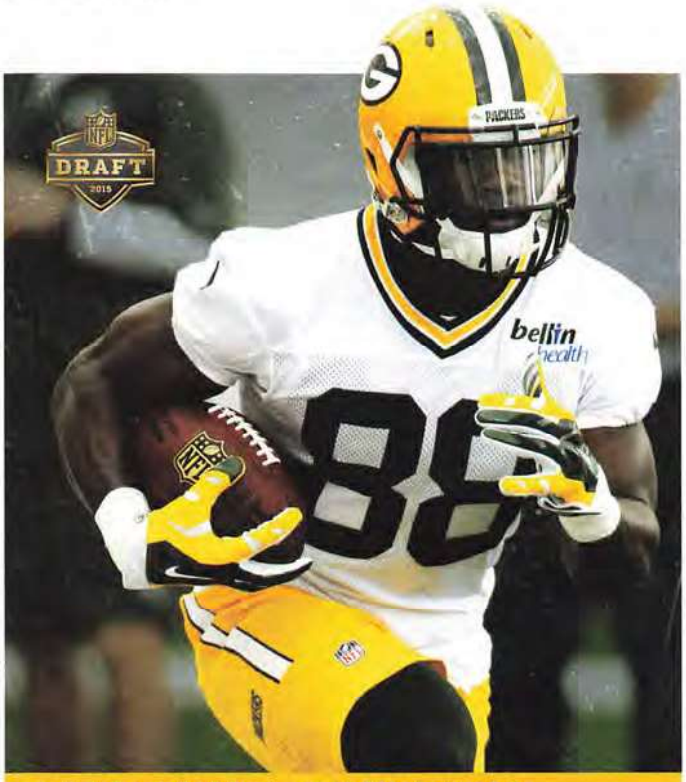
Originally committed to Miami (Ohio) to play basketball. Only began playing football due to a fifth year of sports eligibility remaining.

OUTLOOK:

Despite his inexperience, displayed great ball skills, willingness to hit, and fluidity of a more polished player in his lone season of football at Miami (Ohio). Shouldn't have a ton of bad habits to fix, leaving it up to CB coach Joe Whitt to mold those raw skills. Athleticism should allow him to contribute immediately on special teams, but attitude and willingness to learn could make him a fixture in the secondary for a long time.

WHAT'S BEEN SAID:

"He's a long, linear kid who can run. He's got all the tools of an NFL starter. I think if he had played football for four years he might have challenged to be picked in the top half of the first round. He has ball skills, which is rare for a kid with so little experience." – NFL draft analyst Russ Lande



3RD ROUND, 94TH PICK

TY MONTGOMERY

WR | STANFORD | 6-0, 216

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:

In 2014, selected second-team All-Pac-12 (all-purpose) and honorable mention wide receiver. Averaged 128 all-purpose yards per game. Had a team-high 61 receptions for 604 yards with three TDs, plus 23 rushes for 144 yards and one TD. Averaged 19.8 yards per punt return with two scores, and averaged 25.2 yards per kick return. In 2013, was ranked second nationally with a 30.3 kick-return average (two TDs) and ninth nationally with 157.7 all-purpose yards per game, earning second-team All-America and second-team All-Pac-12 honors. Also led the team in receptions, receiving yards and TD grabs.

KEY STAT:

Became Stanford's leader in career kickoff return yards with 2,133, breaking record of 2,132 held by Chris Owusu (2008-11).

PERSONAL NOTE:

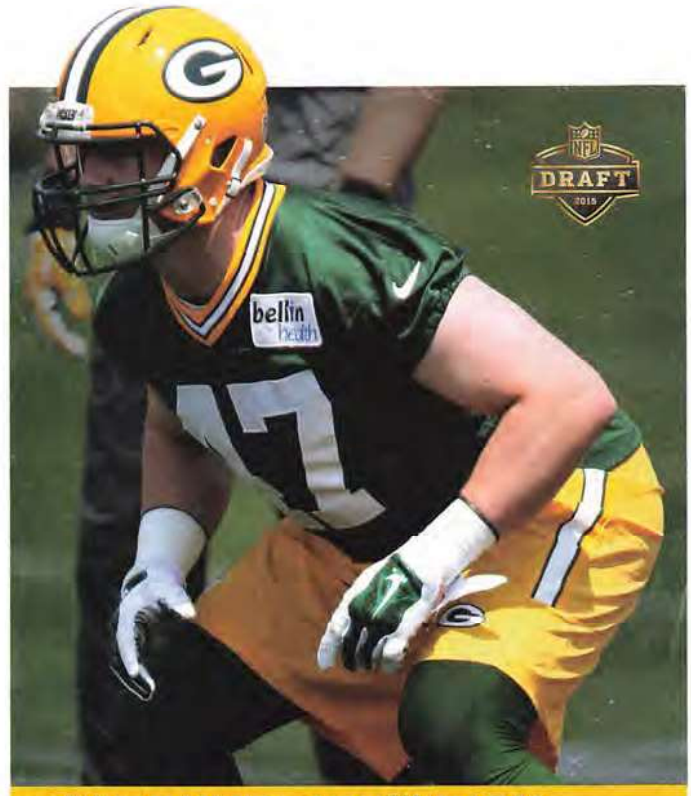
Studied political science and one day wants to work in law enforcement.

OUTLOOK:

Could be the team's answer in the return game, while Head Coach Mike McCarthy and QB Aaron Rodgers incorporate his versatility on offense. Lined up everywhere at Stanford, even in the backfield on occasion. Size and strength make him a tough player to tackle and a legitimate threat any time he touches the ball.

WHAT'S BEEN SAID:

"He is an ideal flanker that can knock the top off of the defense and also run with the football underneath the coverage. With his frame, football demeanor and toughness, expect him to have a long, productive pro career." – Senior Bowl executive director Phil Savage



4TH ROUND, 129TH PICK

JAKE RYAN

LB | MICHIGAN | 6-2, 240

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:

After moving from outside to inside linebacker in 2014, made 12 starts and led Michigan in tackles and tackles for loss with 112 and 14, respectively, en route to All-Big Ten first-team honors from both league coaches and media. Overcame torn ACL in spring 2013, making it back to start five of last eight games that season. Started 24 games at outside linebacker and defensive end in 2011-12. Was a two-year captain and the 2014 Michigan team MVP.

KEY STAT:

Compiled 41 starts, 267 total tackles and 45.5 tackles for loss over his career at Michigan.

PERSONAL NOTE:

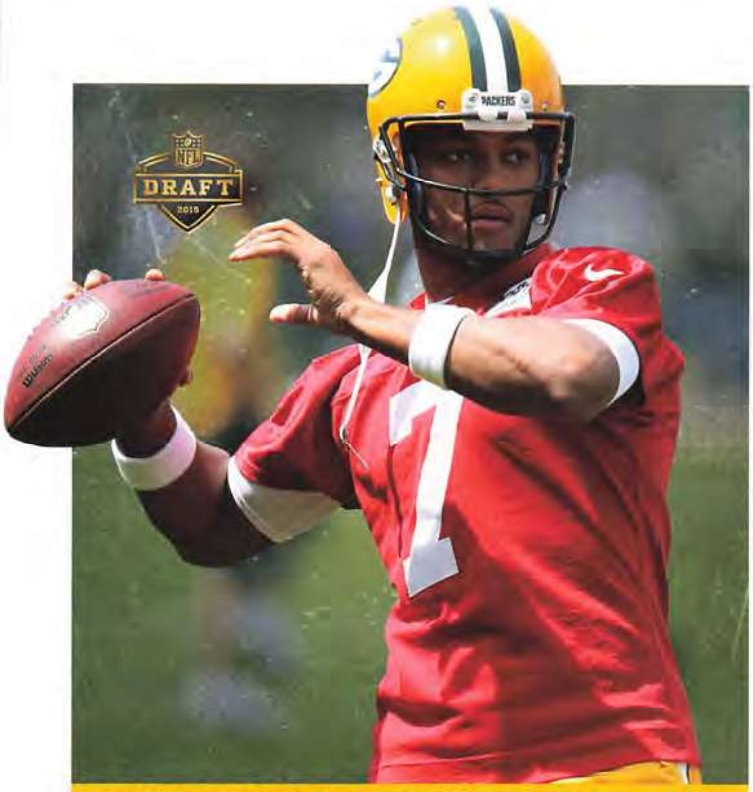
Comes from football bloodlines as his grandfather, Francis E. Sweeney, played defensive tackle at Xavier; his father, Tim, played wide receiver at Wake Forest; his older brother, Connor, played football at Ball State; and his younger brother, Zack, is currently playing at Ball State.

OUTLOOK:

Possesses many traits typical of inside linebackers – tough, smart, and physical. Only played inside for 14 games, but that became his best season in Ann Arbor. Work ethic and passion for the game are evident in quick recovery from torn ACL. Will get a chance to compete for a starting spot immediately, and at a minimum, should contribute on special teams this season.

WHAT'S BEEN SAID:

"My favorite player in the draft." – Longtime NFL executive and current ESPN analyst Bill Polian



5TH ROUND, 147TH PICK

BRETT HUNDLEY

QB | UCLA | 6-3, 226

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:

Redshirted in 2011 and started last three years. For his career, completed 837 of 1,241 passes (67.5%) for 9,966 yards, 75 TDs and 25 INTs. Also rushed 479 times for 1,747 yards (3.6 avg.) and 30 TDs. First UCLA quarterback to produce at least nine wins in three straight seasons as starter. Owns several school career records, including total offense (11,713 yards), passing TDs (75) and completions (837).

KEY STAT:

As a junior last season, completed 69.1 percent of his passes for 3,155 yards, 22 TDs and only five INTs.

PERSONAL NOTE:

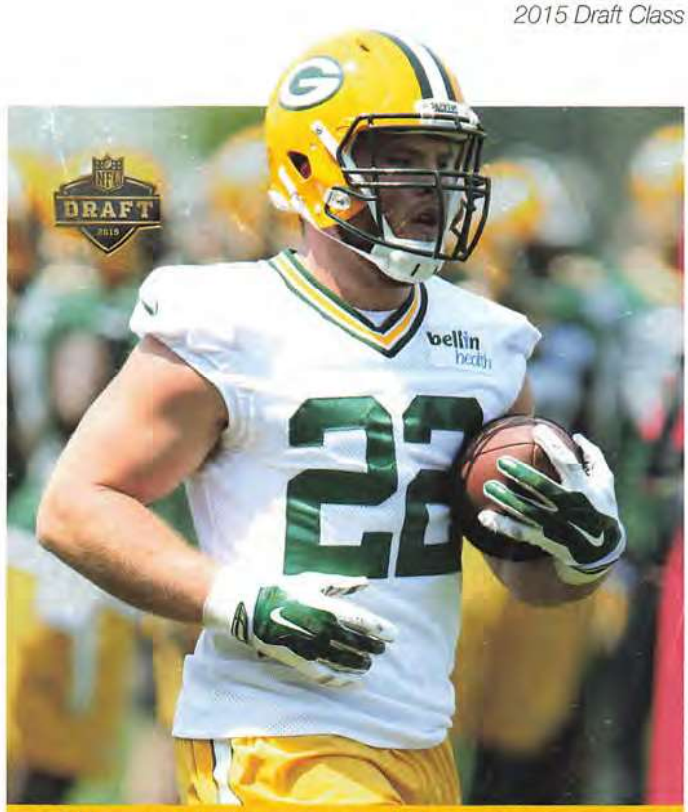
Became first UCLA QB drafted since Cade McNown in 1999.

OUTLOOK:

Will have luxury of learning behind one of game's best in Aaron Rodgers, which should ease development and immediate pressure so many young QBs face. Has great size and plenty of arm strength to make all the NFL throws, plus elusiveness in the pocket that Mike McCarthy covets in his QBs. Receives rave reviews on his character, and may be hungry to prove critics wrong after lasting until the fifth round of the draft.

WHAT'S BEEN SAID:

"He's just a very motivated kid. He has the keys to the meeting room, a film machine at home. He's the first one in, and the last one out. All those clichés that describe great work ethic and great leadership — Brett, he is the cliché." – UCLA coach Jim Mora Jr.



6TH ROUND, 206TH PICK

AARON RIPKOWSKI

FB | OKLAHOMA | 6-1, 246

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:

In four seasons, played in 46 games, starting 17 and serving as Oklahoma's primary fullback for much of his final two years. Ran ball just six times for 13 yards, but scored three touchdowns. Named to All-Big 12 first team as a senior.

KEY STAT:

Behind his lead blocking in 2014, the Sooners ranked 12th in the nation with 3,395 rushing yards and fifth with 6.1 yards per carry.

PERSONAL NOTE:

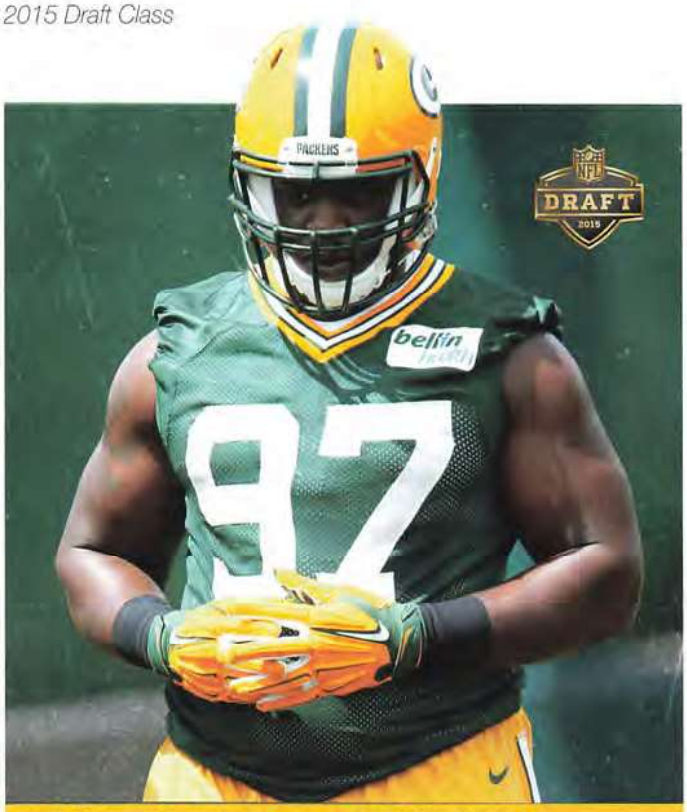
Received only one scholarship offer out of high school, but went to Oklahoma as a walk-on before eventually earning a scholarship.

OUTLOOK:

An old-school fullback who enjoys contact and likes to root people out of the hole, a style reminiscent of his new position coach, former Pro Bowl FB Sam Gash. With pass-catching skills out of the backfield, will be able to keep defenses honest. Could contribute on all four special-teams units, his ticket to being active on gameday as a rookie.

WHAT'S BEEN SAID:

"Ripkowski fits Green Bay's system to a T. Not dissimilar to John Kuhn, Ripkowski might be the eventual replacement at that position." – NFL Network analyst Mark Dulgerian



6TH ROUND, 210TH PICK

CHRISTIAN RINGO

DT | UNIV. OF LOUISIANA-LAFAYETTE | 6-1, 298

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:

Played as a backup in 2011 before starting the past three seasons. Finished with 109 tackles (35.5 for loss) and 21 sacks. Recorded an average of almost two stops for loss per game during conference play as a senior. Named to 2014 All-Sun Belt first team after leading a defensive line that ranked first in the conference in rush defense and third overall in sacks.

KEY STAT:

As a senior, ranked seventh in the nation in tackles for loss with 20 and had 11.5 sacks.

PERSONAL NOTE:

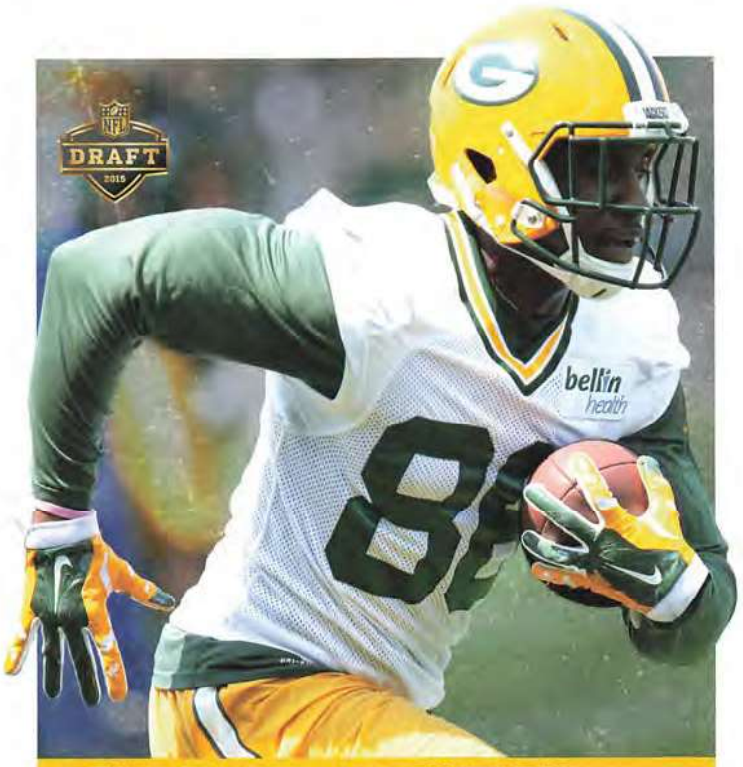
Lost nearly 50 pounds between his freshman and senior seasons of high school, converting his body to more lean muscle mass. Was then viewed as undersized and didn't receive any scholarship offers from the Division I schools in his home state of Mississippi.

OUTLOOK:

A high-motor player who admittedly plays with a chip on his shoulder due to questions about his size, and possesses a style that reminds some of Mike Daniels. Smaller stature, at least by a typical defensive tackle's standards, didn't stop him from getting after quarterbacks in college, thanks to impressive lower body strength. Will have to hone his technique to beat NFL offensive linemen, but will have a shot at cracking the defensive line rotation.

WHAT'S BEEN SAID:

"I'm glad I don't have to block that guy. He's got a relentless motor. He plays hard, and he's very accountable. He takes his gap, does his job and can rush the passer." – Louisiana-Lafayette coach Mark Hudspeth



6TH ROUND, 213TH PICK

KENNARD BACKMAN

TE | UNIV. OF ALABAMA-BIRMINGHAM | 6-3, 245

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS:

A three-year starter, played in 48 games and made 37 starts. Earned 2013 All-Conference USA honorable mention from the league's coaches. Named to watch list for 2014 John Mackey Award, presented annually to nation's top collegiate tight end.

KEY STAT:

Finished his career with 96 receptions for 979 yards and seven touchdowns.

PERSONAL NOTE:

Didn't play football at Whitefield Academy, the high school he attended in Georgia, until his sophomore year, but still managed to get on the field as a freshman, in the marching band.

OUTLOOK:

Appears suited to usual dual role of tight end, providing downfield target in passing game as well as in-line blocker for running game. Has size, athleticism, and willingness to play physical. Joins group of young tight ends and has the body type Packers often employ on special teams.

WHAT'S BEEN SAID:

"Could be a sleeper. Terrific athlete that can get down the field." – NFL draft analyst Tony Pauline

Former Packers GM Wolf arrives in Canton as QB Favre joins Packers Hall of Fame

By Martin Hendricks | Packer Plus

"I think it's great that it's happening at the same time. They made each other's career. There was always a mutual respect between them because they each did it their own way, ignored critics, and were all about football."

-Eliot Wolf

As a middle-schooler, Eliot Wolf once made a half-serious statement to his father, then the general manager of the Green Bay Packers.

"I was in the sixth grade or so and I was joking around a little with him," recalled Eliot, now the Packers' director of pro personnel. "I said, 'Hey Dad, when you get in the (Pro Football) Hall of Fame, I'm going to present you.'"

Green Bay was a few years away from winning Super Bowl XXXI, so the notion of the elder Wolf having a bust in Canton was just a hope, a dream.

That aspiration became a reality in early February, when the former Green Bay GM from 1991-2000 was selected for the National Football League's highest honor. Ron Wolf, 76, will be inducted into the Hall of Fame in the newly created contributor category—and his son will do the presentation honors.

"It just something you don't think is possible—being in the Hall of Fame," the elder Wolf said. "It's an incredible feeling and honor—I'm overwhelmed.

"It's been an amazing road and I worked with a lot of talented and dedicated people in Green Bay. I was brought there to win—and we turned it around and brought the franchise back to life. No one can do that alone, and no one can take that away from us."

Wolf joins an elite group—Curly Lambeau and Vince Lombardi—that is synonymous with the Green Bay franchise. "Ron is one of the all-time greats, an important figure in our history," said Bob Harlan, former president and CEO during the 1990s renaissance.

Harlan hired the nearly 53-year-old Wolf in late November 1991 to invigorate and resurrect a proud organization that had made the playoffs just twice in the past 25 years.

"Ron started out doing exactly what we thought. He took control," Harlan said. "He upgraded everything in a hurry, from the training room to the draft room . . . He was in charge. That's what we hoped for and that's what he did for us. He changed the culture."

Wolf first relieved Lindy Infante of his duties after a 4-12 season and in January 1992 hired the hottest NFL prospect as his new head coach: Mike Holmgren of the San Francisco 49ers. He then traded a first-round pick to acquire quarterback Brett Favre, a move that raised eyebrows at the time.

"Ron missed out getting Brett in 1991 when he was with the Jets—he thought very highly of him, that he was something special," said Steve Mariucci, former Green Bay quarterbacks coach on Holmgren's staff.

"Brett didn't know it, but he had Ron Wolf in his corner from day one. And Brett didn't want to let him down."

With his franchise quarterback in place, Wolf assembled talent through the draft and free agency, including the landmark signing of defensive end Reggie White in 1993.

Green Bay never experienced a losing season in Wolf's nine-year tenure and posted a 92-52 (.639) regular-season record—the second-best in the league during that span—and a 101-57 (.639) overall mark.

The Packers defeated New England in Super Bowl XXXI and lost to Denver a year later in Super Bowl XXXII, but earned six playoff berths and three NFC Central Division crowns.

Lambeau Field was again a feared venue, as Green Bay posted a 60-12 (.833) record in regular-season home games and the "Lambeau Leap" became an institution.

"We felt we could win every time we stepped on the field," former safety LeRoy Butler said. "Ron worked hard to change the culture and he always appreciated all the hard work we put in as players."

As foreshadowed by his son in the early 1990s, Wolf becomes the 23rd franchise member inducted on Aug. 8 during the enshrinement ceremony for the 2015 class at Tom Benson Hall of Fame Stadium in Canton.

And it fittingly comes after Favre's triumphant formal return to Green Bay and induction into the Packers Hall of Fame on July 18 during a sold-out banquet—which was also viewed inside Lambeau Field by more than 67,000 fans.

"I think it's great that it's happening at the same time," Eliot Wolf said. "They made each other's career. There was always a mutual respect between them because they each did it their own way, ignored critics, and were all about football."

A framed photograph of Wolf and Favre is prominently displayed in Ron Wolf's basement.

"It sits on a shelf all by itself," Eliot Wolf said. "It says, 'To Ron, my other daddy. Brett Favre.'"

Of course, there's one more honor to come for the quarterback Wolf secured in one of the greatest trades in NFL history.

In August 2016, Favre is certain to join Wolf in Canton in his first year of eligibility, marking the first time since 1980-81 that Green Bay has had back-to-back inductees. Herb Adderley was inducted in 1980, and his teammates Willie Davis and Jim Ringo were enshrined in 1981.

A former rival acknowledged Wolf's place in the NFL.

"Ron Wolf turned the Packers into winners again," former Bears

Ron Wolf with his son, Eliot Wolf

head coach Mike Ditka said. "Like Lombardi, he came to Green Bay with a vision. You have to have people—from administrators to coaches to the players in the locker room—who believe in each other.

"Ron hired a great coach in Mike Holmgren and they drafted or traded for players they built into a Super Bowl team. It didn't happen overnight, and there's no magic—you have to have the players. And it started with Brett Favre, who was good for the Packers and good for the NFL."

Holmgren shared his thoughts in a team release after Wolf's selection was announced. "He was not only the best GM in the business, but also very much a mentor to me in all things about the NFL," Holmgren said.

"In all our years together (1992-98), while we didn't agree on everything, we never had a harsh moment. It was a privilege to work with him."

Eliot Wolf has followed in his father's footsteps and will be at Wolf's side in Canton.

"He views it as the ultimate honor and his excitement hasn't waned at all," Wolf said. "For me, it's an awesome honor to present him. Our whole family is very proud of him. Not only for his career in Green Bay, but for his influence on scouting and on a lot of other people who have gone on to have an impact throughout the league." ■■■
